THE PET OF THE PUBLIC.

CHAPTER IV.

SILAS SLOPER FINDS THAT HE HAS BEEN A FOOL AS WELL AS A ROGUE.

It was summer time; the night was warm and the people belonging to the shows, ginger nut stalls and such like, had no need to be particular about their sleeping apartments. While some were sleeping within the booths, others, wrapped in king's robes or in the sheet which had enveloped the "Bleeding Nun," were lying on or under the parade on which during the day they had stood, tearing their lungs in the endeavor to persuade the public to "walk up!"

Others again had preferred to lie out in the open air, with the broad blue sky for the canopy of their bed. Three professionals attached to one of the booths had been invited to a supper and jollification at a rival establishment. The jollification had endured so long, that those three gentlemen, singing "We Won't go Home till Morning," happened to be passing near Silas Sloper's booth, on the way to their own canvas home, just as the flames, which Twister had caused, burst forth.

"Fire! fire!" they shouted.

That cry aroused the lad from the stupor of terror into which he had fallen. He vanished through a gap in the canvas, which the flames had in an instant made, and off he ran, and after him the three men who had uttered the cry of alarm. Twister darted off in a direction exactly opposite to that by which he had instructed little Lucy to proceed.

Whatever might happen to himself, he would not destroy the young girl's chance of escape. And should he succeed in distancing his pursuers, he would be able afterwards to make his way to the spot where he had told Lucy to await his coming. But he was not to rejoin her there, nor to see her again for many a year. The professional gentlemen in chase of him Twister was fast out-running, and if no one had interfered with the race his escape had been a certainty. But the many and loud cries of "Fire!" had startled cottagers from their sleep, and from their beds, as they beheld the red glare. As soon as possible they hurried forth from their cottages, the consequence of which, for Twister, was that he found himself intercepted every way.

"Stop him!" with the last puff of breath left to them, shouted the professional gentlemen behind Twister, and, after many dodgings and twistings, stopped he was accordingly.

Hercules and Mr. Merryman, roused from their drunken sleep by the loud outcry, were sobered in an instant as they beheld the circling flames, which had already reached the beds on which they had been so luxuriously reposing. They both got stinged a little in fighting their way from the burning booth.

"Once more I'm a ruined man," groaned Sloper, and dealt a kick to the man fish.

"Are you going to let the gal be burned?" cried Chizzlem.

"Gracious, no, Chowser; for she is once again my only hope on earth."

They hastened to wheel the sleeping carriage beyond the reach of the fire, Sloper calling out:—

"Don't you be afraid, my gal, you are safe enough; I'll take care of you."

"How kind and fatherly you are, guvnor," ironically cried Chizzlem.

In less than ten minutes the flames had consumed every stick and shred of Sloper's booth, and the unfortunate and so many times ruined showman gazed mournfully upon its ashes, and asked, in a most pathetic tone, if any good Christian would oblige him with a drop of rum. But suddenly a thought struck upon him, and he exclaimed:—

"Merciful geminy!—I had forgot all about him—where is he?"

"Ah, true," cried Chizzlem, "where is he, where's Twister.

"He can't have been burned to death! Does anybody know what's become of Twister?"

Just then the lad, held by a couple of stout countrymen, was dragged to the presence of the once more ruined showman.

"This is the fellow that set fire to the booth," said one of the professional gentlemen who had been the cause of the lad's capture.

"Did you, did you?" gasped Sloper.

"It was an accident," replied the lad.

"An accident!"

"Yes, but I may as well tell you that I had before determined to burn the booth down, only my courage failed me at the last moment."

"Oh, it did, did it? And it was an accident, was it, you hypocritical thief!"

"Don't believe him, Sloper," exclaimed the professional gentleman before mentioned—"give him into custody."

"Ah!" thought Twister, "I wish he would do that! But he won't, for he has far more cause than I to dread a magistrate."

And he judged correctly.

"No," said Sloper; "I shan't do that; it would be difficult to bring the crime home to him, and, besides, I have too great a liking for the lad to punish him in that sort of way."

And, perhaps to give an idea of the sort of way in which he did intend to punish Twister, he plunged forward his great boot, which the lad, springing on one side, avoided, and the heavy favor intended for him was received by Mr. Merryman. The true cause of Sloper's reluctance to prosecute the supposed incendiary was perfectly well comprehended by his brother showmen, and they said no more. Gradually all dropped away, leaving Silas Sloper to do as he liked with the delinquent.

"I'll make you sorry for this," the showman said to Twister, who was in custody of the two stout men that, besides assisting to build and pull down the booth, drive the caravan and such like, had been made to wear suits of tin armor and to strut about on the outside of the show.

"I'll go now to the girl," continued Sloper; "she must have been frightened almost out of her life, poor thing!"

"What a miserable old humbug he is," muttered Chizzlem, taking good care not to be heard by the object of that remark.

Twister allowed the showman to proceed to the carriage, because every minute would be an advantage to the little runaway.

Back in a very short time came running Sloper, and roaring and raving, stamping and tearing his hair.

"She's gone, she's gone!" he exclaimed.

"Not the gal!" cried Mr. Merryman, made anything but merry by that announcement.

"Yes—now I understand all this fellow's pretended dislike of her—they were both of them humbugging us. Oh! that I, I who in my time have done so many should live to be tricked and bamboozled by a boy and a girl! Where is she, you deceitful young villain."

"Find that out if you can," boldly responded the lad.

"It's easy to know which way she has gone," said Chowser.

"How, my child?" eagerly demanded the showman.

"Why, of course, the way that fellow was running when he was caught and brought back here."

"True, my dear child, true, and with her little legs she can't have got above a mile or two. Our old horses ain't a bit of good, but——" this was addressed to the two men to whom we have just made allusion—"go to old Brown, his pair can trot a bit, and try if you can't catch the gal; remember that if you don't I shall have no further occasion for your valuable services."

Away hurried the two men, and Chizzlem was left to guard the boy. Silas Sloper strode desperately several times round the spot where so lately had stood the finest booth in the fair, and then groaning out:—

"Now I am more ruined than ever I was before," flopped himself down amongst the still warm ashes, and there, for two long hours, he sat, without speech or movement, and, had he been at all classical, which, of course, he wasn't, might have likened himself to Marius amongst the ruins of Carthage!

Quite three hours had passed when the men on the borrowed horses returned, and the wretched showman very quickly perceived that little Lucy was not with them.

"You can't find her?" wildly shouted Sloper.

"No," was the reply, "and we have hunted round about for miles every way."

Turning furiously towards Twister, the showman saw the smile of satisfaction which the lad had no desire to hide. With a horrible oath Silas Sloper dashed his huge fist into the lad's face; and laid him bleeding and senseless on the ground.

CHAPTER V.

MORE RUIN!

Lucy having escaped, the two showmen thought it very necessary that they also should take themselves off. Wherever the little girl had gone, she was certain, they thought, to relate her history on the first opportunity that offered, and kidnapping was rather a serious offence. They were reduced again to tramping and mountebanking about the country. They dared not allow Twister to go from them, and yet most gladly would they have been rid of him. He became perfectly untractable in their hands, refused to do anything whatever of all that he had been taught by the showman, and evinced such determined hatred against them that they feared to attempt any kind of performance lest Twister should tell his story and appeal to the people who would have gathered around. Kicked and cuffed till his body was all over bruises, and more than half starved besides, Twister continued obstinate and unyielding, and Sloper and his friend were driven to despair. They tramped from place to place, getting poorer and poorer, till they had fallen into a far worse condition than when we first made their acquaintance behind the haystack. Finding that coercive measures would do nothing for them, Sloper and Mr. Merryman tried what mild persuasion and large promises would effect with Twister. But the latter treatment succeeded no better than the former. They had arrived one evening about dusk at the entrance of a small village, when Sloper suddenly called a halt, and hastily whispered something into Chizzlem's ear, taking care that he was not observed by Twister.

"Now, look'ee here, young fellow," Sloper said aloud, "don't you think you have done me quite mischief enough without keeping it up any longer?"

"And what have you done to me?" said Twister.

"That's nothing at all to do with it. If I hadn't been too tender and soft-hearted, I should have killed you right out on the night that you deprived me of the greatest prodigy that was ever known, and burnt down the most beautiful booth that ever was seen."

"Thank your luck, young 'un, that the governor is such a kind Christian," said Chowser.

"Hold your tongue, my child," cried Sloper, lunging out with his big boot and making a great impression on Mr. Merryman.

"I wish," said the latter, "you wouldn't remind yourself of past times quite so often."

"I suppose, Twister," proceeded the showman, "you have quite made up your mind that you will do me more work?"

"No more of that work," responded the lad.

"Well, it has come to this with us—it's either work, starve, or steal! Chowser and I don't mean to starve outright, you decline to work, and so you must steal for us."

"Steal!" exclaimed Twister.

"Yes; you won't object to that, will you? that's easy, and Chowser and I must be fed. Oh, come, don't look indignant, but listen. You want to get away from us, don't you? well, then, steal, and when you have obtained for me enough to set me on my legs again you shall have your liberty."

"What do you say?"

"Don't you see that then I should have no reason to be afraid of anything you could say against me, and that, being a thief, your story would be considered a mere invention. Come now, isn't it worth while to buy your liberty in that way, the only way in which you are ever likely to obtain it. And when away from me you can go back to the paths of honesty, you know."

"I am afraid he wouldn't be able to find the road," grinned Chizzlem, and retreated a step or two as he saw the big boots beginning to stir.

"Are you not the devil himself?" Twister said to the mighty Hercules.

"No, I am a virtuous member of society, spoiled by contact with such wretches as Chowser Chizzlem. But come, boy, what do you say to my proposal? Look there!"

Sloper pointed to a rather important looking dwelling which stood at the entrance of the village, and to which the nearest house was quite a hundred yards away.

"You see, don't you, that the parlor window is half open?" pursued Silas. "Well, I took a survey of the room as we passed the house just now; there was nobody in it, but I observed a watch with a good bunch of seals hanging over the mantelpiece, and some other nice little and easily portable bits of property lying about——"

"And you propose to me——"

"Yes, that you should let Chowser and I hoist you into the room, that you should gather up those various little articles, hand them out to me, and then we slip round into the lane there and are gone in a moment."

Twister appeared to reflect.

"Come, come," said Sloper, "think of all I have said to you."

"And think of what a glorious supper we should have to-night," urged Chizzlem.

"I'll do it," said Twister.

"Good boy," cried the delighted showman; "I forgive you everything!"

They returned a short distance the way they had come, then crossed the road and advanced again till they had reached the house on which it was intended to operate.

Having looked carefully about, and in at the open window, Sloper said in a low voice:—

"The room is still without a soul in it, and not a single individual about on the road; and if there were, it is getting so dark that nobody would be able to make out what we are like. So come along; look sharp over the job, but be sure that you don't leave behind anything worth taking."

The two men lifted Twister up to a level with the window, and into the room he quietly dropped.

But instead of proceeding as Sloper had expected, Twister ran to the door of that apartment, threw it open, and with all the power of voice that belonged to him, shouted:—

"House! Help! Thieves! Thieves!"

"The devil seize him," exclaimed Hercules.

"He's done us again," cried Mr. Merryman; and off both went as hard as they could scamper.

And in time to catch a glimpse of them as they left the window a man came hurrying into the room, before whom Twister cast himself on his knees, and, with clasped hands, exclaiming:—

"Have pity on me—save me! save me!"

CHAPTER VI.

THE LITTLE TRAMP.

The real name of the youth whom hitherto we have known only as Twister was George Gladwin. His father and mother were dead. His mother had gone first, and his father, a tradesman in a small market town, had in dying bequeathed his business, all that he had to leave, to his wife's brother, on the condition that he should be a faithful guardian to the orphan boy.

The condition was readily accepted, the pledge given, but the uncle of poor little George Gladwin proved to be a callous, heartless wretch. Soon he resolved to dispose of the business of which, with such cruel frandulency, he had obtained possession, and to proceed to Australia. But he had no idea of being burthened with his nephew, and it became a trouble to him to know how to dispose of the lad. How he got rid of him we need not linger on our way to relate. Enough to say that one morning George was presented by his uncle to Mr. Silas Sloper, and told that he was to accompany that gentleman, to remain a few years with him, and that his new protector would teach him a genteel business and make a man of him. George felt more of pleasure than regret that he was about to leave his uncle, who, as will readily be believed, had treated him very brutally. All this, and a full account of everything that had occurred to him since he had been given into the clutches of the villainous Silas Sloper, did the lad pour forth to the man at whose feet, with a last hope, he had cast himself. Wilbraham Moyston, the good man to whom George had appealed, and who was a schoolmaster, the only one for miles around, at once believed, and unhesitatingly pledged himself, to guard and protect the poor orphan boy. And then, while congratulating himself on the happiness that had come to him, George Gladwin sighed as he thought of little Lucy, and wondered what had been her fate. When George had been about a week with his generous protector, the worthy man one morning said to him:—

"I am going on a journey, but shall soon return, and you must keep within the house and take care of yourself till you see me again. Not that I think it at all likely that those horrible men have remained in the neighborhood."

"Oh, no, sir," replied the lad, "I know them but too well, and rely upon it they are many miles away."

Wilbraham Moyston returned from his journey at the end of the second day after his departure, and said at once to his protege:—

"Well, George, where think you I have been?"

The truth instantly struck the lad, and, turning very pale, he said:—

"You have been to my uncle? Oh, sir, for pity's sake do not send me back to him!"

"It would give me some trouble to do that," smiled the schoolmaster, "for I should have to pack you off to Australia."

"He is gone there," cried George, feeling greatly relieved.

"Yes, poor wronged boy; I had hoped to compel him to do you justice, but he has made that an impossibility."

"Let him go, sir; he is a bad man, and heaven will not allow that he shall prosper."

"I have learned that he was far worse than you had painted him to me. And now, once for all, listen to me, George. I am a childless widower, and would have you be to me as a son; but it is not much that I shall have to give you; I am but a village schoolmaster, poor enough, heaven knows, and if you remain with me you must prepare yourself for a life of toil, and, it may be, to endure many and sore trials on your journey towards manhood."

"What, could I not find courage to brave, since I shall have you, dear, generous friend and father, to sustain me by your counsel, and to encourage me by your example?"

Leaving George Gladwin happy in his new home, we must for a time devote ourselves entirely to little Lucy. Lucy stole from the caravan and made her way to the clump of trees precisely as had been arranged between herself and Twister. There she waited and beheld the red glare caused by the burning of Sloper's booth, of course believing that the fire had been intentionally caused.

"Oh, why would he do that?" she said; "how wicked!"

The noise and commotion that ensued reached her ear as she stood trembling, and every moment hoping to see the lad whom she had expected to be the partner of her flight. Fully two hours passed away and he came not; then did she feel but too well convinced that what she had all along been fearing had come to pass, and that the lad had been baffled in his attempt to escape.

"What will become of him? What will they do to him?" passed through her mind. "Ah! if he had been satisfied to do no more than escape, and not to seek that vengeance of which he was always talking, how happy now we both of us might have been."

But Lucy had no thought of returning to her miserable bondage; no, she would take her chance in the wide world; nothing could happen to her worse than that which she so long had been made to endure. She knew that it would soon be daybreak, and that if she lingered longer where then she was her recapture would be made almost a certainty. So she quitted the clump of trees, and took at random one of the branching roads that lay before her. Whither it might lead was to her quite an immaterial matter; any road was good that would take her from Silas Sloper. Onward she went, every now and then stopping and listening, and when daylight had come often glancing back to ascertain if she were pursued. But nothing occurred to occasion on her the smallest alarm on that account. She had set forth on her wanderings after a long, hard day's work in the booth, and it was perfectly wonderful that the poor child could find strength to go walking on mile after mile and hour after hour. But she was in the pure, free air, was leaving behind her a life of slavery and degradation, of torture and pollution to both mind and body, and the thought of all that sustained and gave undying courage to little Lucy. At length, however, she became so exhausted that she was compelled to stop and rest. She climbed over a gate into a field, laid herself down under a hedge, and murmuring:—

"I don't think they will find me now—" was fast asleep in a moment.

And her sleep lasted quite three hours, and when she did awake it was to discover, first of all, that she was most terribly hungry. She had no money, not a farthing, and, re-crossing the gate, saw not a house, look which way she would, only the long, hard road, herself the only traveler on it. But Lucy did not despair, did not even begin to cry. She said to herself:—

"I am sure to come to a house if I walk long enough," and on again she went.

And she did walk long enough, far too long she thought, and then the first house she saw was almost a mile ahead. But the goal in view, her strength appeared renewed, and, for the time, hunger and fatigue were both of them gone. As she neared that house she saw that it was quite a mean dwelling, much such another as that from which she had been torn by that vile showman. And then she had to drive back thoughts of her father and of her little sister Sophy, for to remember them at such a time would be to annihilate all her little stock of courage. The door of that hut was open, and quite a crowd of children, tolerably ragged and not over clean, were rolling and tumbling about on the door step. As Lucy shily approached the door, the children left off tumbling and rolling to stare at her with all their eyes, while the biggest of them shouted out:—

"Mother, come here—here's a gal!"

The mother of that numerous progeny was not, as how should she have been, in the tidiest possible condition, and, a thing also not to be wondered at, appeared to be in anything but a good temper.

"If you please, will you give me a drink of water and a little bit of bread?" Lucy very timidly pleaded.

"I declare," said the woman, "I am pestered with tramps all day long. I should think you might, all of you, find better houses than mine to go to, Sarah," —to one of her children—"go and give the gal a mug of water. You can't help seeing that I am not likely to have much to give away——"

"Yes, and I am very sorry, but——"

"If you've got a father and mother what pretty wretches they must be to send a young gal like you out, to go tramping and cadging about the country. Now, you Sarah," the woman yelled out, "are you going to bring that water? If I have to come and fetch you I warrant I'll make you walk a little faster."

Handing the jug back after a long draught, Lucy said in trembling tones:—

"And won't you then give me a bit of bread, if you please?"

"I wonder, gal, you can have the conscience to ask the likes of me—look at all these children, and my husband working in the fields all day, and never earning more than nine shillings a week, and everything such a price; why, it's as much as we can do to get a bit of bread for her own children, let alone giving it away to other people's. There's some people better off than me, a little further along; try them, and they won't mind giving you a bit of bread, I dare say."

It added bitterness to the refusal that, while Lucy was standing there, two or three of the children had in their fist a lump of bread, at which they were gnawing away with great relish. Lucy was about to turn away when a small hunk of bread was thrust into her hand by one of the children, a little girl of about her own age. That child had received her allowance with the rest, but had been staring very hard at Lucy, and, twiddling the piece of bread about in her hands, had shown herself in no hurry to commence eating it. And Lucy trembled with eagerness, the eagerness of extreme hunger, as she clutched that small lump of bread, but she had resolution to forbear carrying it to her mouth.

"Thank you, dear, thank you," said Lucy, "but you must take it back, or you will have to go without yourself."

"Oh, no, I shan't," said the child; "mother will give me another lump, won't you, mother?"

The mother nodded and wiped her eyes; Lucy commenced to devour the bread and embraced and kissed, with her mouth full, the generous little donor.

CHAPTER VII.

THE LITTLE BALLAD SINGER.

Afterwards, as Lucy trudged along, it occurred to her:—

"People used to pay to hear me sing in the booth, why shouldn't they give me money if I sing at some of the places as I go along?"

The first house she came to that had about it an air of respectability sufficiently promising for the purpose, the little girl planted herself before it, and, invoking her best courage, commenced to sing. Her voice was not in its best condition, as may very well be imagined, but the servant of the house beckoned to her, and according to instructions received gave Lucy three pence, and, having taken a good look at the little girl, added a penny from her own purse. The poor child was overjoyed because she had now discovered that she would have no occasion to beg again to save herself from starvation. Whether she was to live always by ballad singing from house to house she troubled not herself to think about; she was entirely too young to concern herself as to what would become of her in the future, and would be perfectly contented with something to eat and somewhere to sleep in the present. Soon afterwards Lucy reached a village, sang again, and on leaving it found herself worth more money than she had ever been able to call her own in all her life before. She was mistress of the enormous sum of sevenpence halfpenny!

And much notice had been taken of her, and she had been asked many questions, all of which she answered by saying that she had nobody to depend upon but herself, and was forced to go about singing in order to obtain her living. That was just the simple account which she continued, day after day, to give of herself to all inquirers, for she had always a dread lest she should herself furnish a clue by which Silas Sloper might be able to trace her out and get her again within his clutches. Having well regaled herself, Lucy would be able to rest for the night, for had she been near any town, and she was not, the few coppers left to her after her feast would be insufficient to procure her a lodging in any house. The end of it was that she slept, soundly and well, beneath an old, disused shed that she saw standing a little apart from the road she was pursuing.

The next day Lucy reached a town of some size and sang about it for several hours, and with a success that fairly amazed her, for she had no idea how excellent was the quality of her voice and how great the taste with which she warbled. Her day's labor over, the little girl proceeded to a house which she had perceived in her progress about the town, and over the door of which was written, in a very ugly scrawl, "Loggings for travelhers." There she obtained a bed, which, proving in reality tolerably clean and comfortable, was to the little wanderer so luxurious a couch that her young imagination had never pictured its like, and its memory dwelt with her and was delightful amidst the splendor with which a few years afterwards she was surrounded. And the charge for that night's repose in that incomparable and never to be surpassed bed was threepence! Two women—tramps—slept in the same room with Lucy, who, innocently and unsuspectingly, proceeded, before retiring to rest, to count her day's earnings.

"You seem to have had a good day of it, my gal," said one of the women.

"Yes," replied the proud and happy Lucy; "after having my supper and paying for my bed, I have got two and tenpence left."

When Lucy awoke in the morning those two women were gone, and so too was her money. Lucy was quite a philosophical little lady, and so she bore her loss very well.

"It serves me right," she said, "and has given me a good lesson. One good thing, I can earn some more!"

The young girl traveled on and on, and prospered well by the way. One day she chanced to learn that her journeyings, pursued at hazard, had, at last, brought her within twenty miles of London. And of London she had heard so much in the course of her travels! At the different lodging houses she had so often heard tramps say that London was the only place in the world worth talking about, that everything was to be done there, and that nothing could be done out of it, and if people could do anything and had their wits about them, they couldn't help thriving in London! So to London Lucy resolved that she would go, for, since she had thriven so well in the provinces, it followed, she believed, as a matter of course, that in the great metropolis it would, for her, rain money—not in fitful showers, but steadily and constantly.

But, alas! poor little Lucy! In London she was lost in a constant state of bewilderment, and unable to make her small, sweet voice penetrate through the din and clatter, against which she everywhere had to contend. Nobody heeded, nobody listened to her, and, indeed, suffering and privation had soon robbed her voice of all its once sweet melody, and if occasionally a copper was thrown to her, it was not as a reward for the entertainment she had furnished, but out of pity for her too evidently forlorn and miserable condition. We shall leap over and not attempt to describe those days of inconceivable misery, those wretched nights endured by the poor, homeless, starving child, and proceed to record an incident in her career which was to prove the turning point of her life. Her tide had come, and was to lead her on to fortune and renown.

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

THE BERGER SISTERS.

The musical organization, so long and favorably known as the "Berger Family," consists of the six children of Henry F. and Anna Berger, the former a French political exile, who, with his wife, a German lady, emigrated to America twenty-nine years ago, and settled in Baltimore, Md., where all their children were born, and Mr. B., for many years, extensively engaged in the manufacture of organs. His three daughters, whose likenesses we present in this issue, are named Louisa, Anna and Henrietta, and are respectively 19, 17, and 14 years of age. They have three brothers, viz.:—Fred., who is twenty-one years old; Henry, sixteen; and Bernhart, 13. The entire family received a thorough musical education under Prof. Henry Thiele, of Philadelphia, in which city, Fred., Louisa, Anna and Henry, made their first appearance upon the stage in April, 1862, at a concert given for the purpose of bringing them before the public. For about a year following their debut they gave concerts through the west, under the style of the Berger Children. During the season of 1863-4, they constituted the entire orchestra of the Royal Lyceum, Toronto, C. W., then under the management of A. MacFarland. In July, 1864, they joined the Carter Zouave Troupe at Boston, Mass., and constituted the principal feature with that company for the ensuing two years, at the expiration of which time they formed a combination with Wm. Peak, Jr., under the style of the Peak and Berger Families. They remained with Mr. Peak for three years. The two youngest children, Henrietta and Bernhart, made their debut with this combination in Buffalo, N. Y., in April, 1865. In Sept. '66, the Bergers secured auxiliary talent, and organized a troupe of their own under the management of E. P. Kendall, and after ten months travel through the west and south have just closed a season that is said to have been one of the most successful ever made by a bell ringing troupe. The Bergers are considered one of the most musical families in America. With the exception of the youngest boy they are skilful performers upon nearly every instrument known to musicians. Anna is a superior violinist, a fine cornet soloist, character vocalist and bell player. Louisa is a solo harpist, pianist, violoncellist, contralto singer, and the first female who ever played a trombone in a brass band. Henrietta plays the harp, tenor horn, zithern and staff bells. Fred. and Henry play all kinds of brass, stringed and reed instruments, and the youngest boy is a violinist, snare drummer and bell ringer. They are said to have established a reputation for giving the most original and attractive entertainment that was ever presented in their peculiar line. Louisa Berger was married on Sept. 11th, 1869, at Detroit, Mich., to Sol Smith Russell, the humorist, who is connected with the company. The family will continue under the management of Mr. Kendall, and commence their second season at Jackson, Mich., in August, when they promise, with new and superior auxiliary talent, to present an entertainment that will far excel that given during the season of 1869-70.

A Chicken Dance.

To see a chicken dance requires a long journey. The performers are the sharp tailed grouse dwelling in the northwestern plains and replacing on the west of the Rocky Mountain the well known prairie hen of the eastern districts. This beautiful bird is alike estimable for the admirable sport which it affords, and for its delicacy as an article of food.

The fur hunters term these birds spotted chickens. They pair very early in the spring, and their love meetings are celebrated by remarkable festivities called chicken dances. Their ball room is a high round-topped mound, and the dancing begins either at sunrise, or in the evening, and by the time that the matrimonial arrangements are concluded, and the happy pairs set off for their respective homes, the mound is trampled down as bare as a road.

Mr. Lord saw several of these dances, and gives a very graphic report of the first which he witnessed. Riding up into the hills early one spring morning, he heard the up into the hills early one spring morning, he heard the peculiar chuck-chuck which indicated that a dance was in progress. Tieing up his horse and dog, he crept towards the knoll from whence the sound proceeded, and finally gained the shelter of a stump, from whence, unperceived, he had an excellent view. Like a true lover of nature, he frankly admits the "joyous delight which the sight afforded him. There were," he observes "about eighteen or twenty birds present on this occasion, and it was almost impossible to distinguish the males from the females, the plumage being so nearly alike; but I imagined the females were the passive ones. The four birds nearest to me were head to head, like game cocks in fighting attitude—the neck feathers ruffled up, the little sharp tail elevated straight on end, the wings dropped close to the ground but keeping up by vibration a continued throbbing or drumming sound.

"They circled round and round each other in slow waltzing time, always maintaining the same attitude, but never striking at or grappling with each other; then the pace increased, and one hotly pursued the other until he faced about, and toe-a-toe went waltzing round again: then they did a sort of a 'cure' performance, jumping about two feet into the air until they were winded; and then they strutted about and struck an attitude, like an acrobat after a successful tumble. There were others marching about with their tails and heads as high as they could raise them up, evidently doing the heavy swell; others, again, did not uphave any well defined ideas what they ought to do, and kept flying up and pitching down again, and were manifestly restless and excited—perhaps rejected suitors contemplating something desperate. The music to this egocentric dance was the loud chuck-chuck continuously repeated, and the strange throbbing sound produced by the vibrating wings." Mr. Lord subsequently watched several other balls, in all of which the same series of evolutions was carried out.

NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Thomas Lange manager; W. H. Leighton, W. M. Ward, Sam Ryan, S. W. Glenn, Harry Jordan, J. W. Collier, C. W. Harrison, Sidney Wilkins, Edwin Mortimer, W. H. Stephens, C. Foster, W. Holland, R. Quinlan, D. Walter, J. Marsh, Mrs. Kate Denin Ryan, Mrs. H. B. Leighton, Mlle. Christine Zavistowski, Mrs. H. Jordan, Mrs. H. A. Perry, Miss Hattie Arnold, Mrs. M. E. Burroughs, Miss M. Newton, Miss Emma Smith, Kate Archer, Fraffxie Monell, Carrie Monell, A. Drew, S. Walcers, M. Porter and C. Leroy. 2. We do not.

SATANELLA, San Francisco.—1. We believe your pronunciation of the word to be correct, but the other is more generally used. 2. Some what over-rated. We admit. 3. You cannot have taken the CLIPPER long, or you would have seen that we have given hundreds of portraits of actors and actresses, while half a dozen will cover the number of illustrations of base ball players. You should be sure you're right, as Davy Crockett used to say, then go ahead. While the theatres are closed and indoor amusements in a state of stagnation, the pictures of base ball players are very popular, five, ten and fifteen thousand persons witnessing a first class game.

JONES, Philadelphia.—Distinctive lines of business have nearly fallen into disuse in the principal eastern theatres. Artists are now generally engaged for utility, not in the old acceptance of the word, however, but to play whatever the management may best consider them fit for. Under this signification George W. Marsden would them fit for. Under this signification George W. Marsden would approximate to the heavy business, and Miss Emily Kiehl to walking ladies, in their forthcoming engagement at the Arch Street Theatre, is your cite.

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—A Junior club is any club not belonging to any state association connected with the National Association, no matter how old or young the members may be. A boy's club is one composed of members under eighteen years of age. No Junior club can refuse to play with any other club for state, county or any other championship, unless the other club is in the Senior association. Seniors are not bound to play Junior clubs either.

AMATEUR, Boston, Mass.—The late Edmund Kean was buried in the Richmond, Eng., churchyard on the 25th of May, 1833. The chief mourner was his son, Mr. Charles Kean, who was supported by Mr. Alexander Lee and Mr. S. Knowles. The pall bearers were Mr. Bravam, Mr. W. Farren, Mr. Cooper, Mr. Macready, Mr. Harley and Mr. Dunn.

H. JUDD, Gold Hill, Nevada.—The fastest time made by a sailing vessel between New York and Liverpool is 13 days' 1 hour, 26 minutes, by the clipper ship Sapphire, made in the days from the lightship, Sandy Hook, to Queenstown, in 12 days, 9 hours and 36 minutes. She was off the Old Head of Kinsale in 12 days, 7 hours and 51 minutes.

PUZZLE, Shreveport, La.—You appear to know very little of astronomy. The planet Mercury is the nearest to the sun, being 36,720,000 miles distant from it. There are planetoids at a distance of 250,400,000 miles from the sun, but the stars even of the first magnitude are billions of miles distant.

NAP, N. Y.—1. Lady Thorn has trotted three heats as fast as Goldsmith Maid, and on a track which was a full mile. The time the last heat was made in was 2:24. Thorn is a race of four heats; George Palmer winning the third and not the second, as the types erroneously stated.

WEB, Davenport, Iowa.—According to the last census taken, Prussia has a population of 23,890,545, and France 37,472,732. These figures, however, do not represent the comparative strength of the people now at war in Europe, as Prussia is supported by the North German States.

ECLIPSE, New York.—On June 18, 1863, at Brooklyn. The score was 21 to 13 in favor of Atlantic. The Athletic nine was Kleinfelder, Pratt, Smith, Berkenstock, Paul, Welkin, McBride, Laugherey, Moore and Hamilton. Atlantic—Start, Pearsall, Smith, Smith, Start, Crane, Smith, F. O'Brien, Chapman, Ticknor and Jas. Smith.

F. W., Hopedale, Mass.—The pitchers can be changed in any period of the game, or players in other positions changed from one part of the field to another, without the field umpire's permission, the consent of the opposing nine. Send to Peck & Snyder for the Convention Manual.

H. E., Philadelphia, Pa.—1. Walter Brown was born in Greene Co., Pa., and was never in England before last year. 2. Yes; "Physical Exercises" by Wm. Wood, will give the necessary information. Address Ed. James, whose advertisement will be found in this issue. The price is 50c.

JNO. B., Boston, Mass.—About third rate, or he may take rank with second class pullers, but not first class by any means. Renforth is champion oarsman of England, and either Joe Sadler, Kelly or Taylor can beat William Sadler.

IGNORAMUS.—Dora Shaw in reality exists. She played star engagements in the principal western theatres some years since. She has contributed to literature several poems. She retired from the stage three or four years ago, and is living in retirement in the east.

YORKVILLE TINKER.—The Lingard who performed in character songs and sketches at the Theatre Comique is named William Horace. The Lingard who committed suicide on July 6th was named James W., an actor and manager.

NEW SUBSCRIBER, Donaghue.—1. A had no right to the stakes which were won by B, and ought to have been paid him. A's claim is absurd, and he loses his money by his abjurance. 2. You are in the bet if the horse belonging to the party you bet with is beaten.

Q. CURRER, Cleveland.—There is no difference between assisting and ordering up. In the former it is optional with the dealer to take or not to take, in the latter he must take it up whether it suits him or not.

GEO. A. B., Williamantic, Ct.—1. He is not a Welshman, nor of Welsh descent, that we are aware of. 2. The CLIPPER did not so state. 3. Reburn and McCloskie fought 67 rounds. 4. We do not know where he is at present.

S. P., Greenville, Ill.—Pool is so variously played in different localities that we cannot give a general definition of the game; in addition to, however, that the player should announce at once that he claims "privilege."

R. B., Montgomery, Ala.—You cannot obtain a copy of the rules of the B. B. except by purchasing a copy of Pistiana, price $2.50. Enclose that amount to Ed. James, whose address will be found in another column.

M. M. CANDLESS, Baltimore, Md.—George Cutler is with Gardner and Forepaugh's Circus and Menagerie. For their whereabouts see our summary.

NOSCE TEIPSUM.—1. Miss Polly Daly was born in this city Nov. 25th, 1854. 2. We never publish the residences of lady professionals.

CITIS, Brooklyn.—Lady Thorn was driven in several races by James D. McMann, at Prospect Park, Narragansett Park and elsewhere.

H. H. L., Baltimore.—1. The opposite party should score the points which the player would have made by his violation of the rules. 2. The pack must be complete, or a new deal demanded.

COCKNEY.—1. El Hardy Eddie is traveling with Forepaugh's Menagerie and Circus. For their whereabouts, see our summary. 2. At Brentano's, Union square.

C. THORNTON, Portland, Oregon.—Your communication is on a subject of business between yourself and the party complained of and not of interest to the public and, therefore, inadmissable.

FRANK MAGUIRE.—The fastest omcial mile time is that of Judge Curtis (late General Duke) at Saratoga recently, viz., 1:43¼. In England the time taken is not official.

FAST HORSE, Honesdale, Pa.—You only name nine horses that have trotted in 2:25; Henry, Western Girl, Idol, Surprise, Genet and Bradly have not done so. B has therefore lost his bet.

TOUR OF THE MUTUAL CLUB.

MUTUAL vs. FOREST CITY.

MUTUALS VICTORIOUS.

ROCKFORD, July 27th, '70.

EDITOR CLIPPER.—The Mutuals have visited our burg, gone through us and come out on the other side. In the classic language attributed to the Cardiff Giant originally:—"They came—they saw—they scooped us." Monday afternoon, July 25th, the club which had beaten the White Stockings two days previously, by a score of 9 tallies to as many 0's, came on to the Rockford ball ground in tip-top condition, and losing the toss, went to bat at twenty minutes past three. Fred. Erby, of the Chicago, was chosen umpire—an unfortunate choice, as it proved—but his fair and impartial umpiring in the Red Stocking game the previous week had commended him to all.

First Innings.—Hatfield took 1st base on called balls, Eggler struck out; Hatfield stole 2d, and took 3d on passed balls; Patterson got 1st on a hit to left field, stopped by Stires, and Hatfield came in. Patterson was caught napping on 1st by a swift throw by Spalding; Nelson took 1st on 3 balls; E. Mills fouled a fly to Addy. Side out. 1 run.....Addy got his 2d on a muff by Martin, to 3d on a passed ball, and home on Hastings daisy cutter through short stop for his first. Barnes sent Hastings to 3d on a hot ground hit inside left foul line. Simmons popped one into the air which Hatfield held long enough to have made it a fly catch, and then dropped it, picked it up and sent it to 3d, whence it was fielded to 2d, and the umpire decided Hastings and Barnes out. Foley flew out to left field. Side out. 1 run.

2. Martin took first on three balls, to second on a passed ball and home on C. Mills' hit for first, Foley having let him off by muffing an easy foul fly. C. Mills was put out running to third by a good throw from Hastings. Wolters sent a long fly to Cone and a beautiful catch excused him. Swandel took second off a muff by Stires. At this point of the innings but 1 run had been scored, and two men had their "outs" scored. Hatfield hit a bounder to s. s. and Swandel ran between Barnes and the coming ball. Barnes muffed and Swandel came in, Hatfield accepting his first. Had the ball been held and sent to first the side would have been out with one run; as it was the Mutuals scored 7 runs from the error, almost one half their whole number of tallies. Hatfield, Eggler, Patterson, Nelson, E. Mills and Martin each passed the home plate before Swandel fouled a tip to Hastings. Swandel's 7 runs .....Spalding struck out, Swandel. Spalding hit for first and Doyle struck for second, who passed to s. s. on second base, and he to first, and both men sat down. Side out; no runs.

3. Hatfield was thrown out at 1st by Barnes. Eggler fouled to Hastings. Patterson flew out to Doyle. Side out. No runs.....Cone fouled to catcher. Addy flew out to l. f. Hastings short sleeve was hit by a ball which the catcher held, and the umpire (who "heard the sound thereof but knew not whence it came") pronounced it a "foul, out." Hastings took the erroneous decision in silence, and the side was out. No runs.

4. Nelson forced at 2d. Martin flew out to Barnes, who fielded the ball to 1st before E. Mills could get back, and the side was out. No runs.....Barnes fouled to catcher. Simmons was thrown out at 1st by short stop. Stires sent a bound to pitcher, and was thrown out at 1st. Side out. No runs.

5. Stires went to r. f. and Cone to l. f., changing positions. Martin fouled to Foley. C. Mills was thrown out at 1st by Addy. Wolters sent a fly over Addy, who chased it and caught it running. Side out. No runs.....Spalding struck out, the last two strikes being called one after the other by the umpire, he not striking. Doyle and Cone each flew out to Hatfield. Side out. No runs.

The last three innings were marked by excellent fielding on both sides and by whitewashes following each other in rapid succession.

6. Swandel, Hatfield and Patterson each put in a run. Eggler struck out—his regular dodge. Nelson hit a fly to Simmons. Martin did a "Shoo fly" act with Cone in r. f., and Nelson got to 2d. Stires took a fly from Hastings, and Patterson got to 3d. Simmons took a fly from Barnes, and Patterson scored on Nelson's slow handling; Allison the same through Hatfield's fault; H. Wright hit to E. Mills and went out, and nocking but a muff of Hatfield's saved Allison at second. Swandel struck out, leaving the score as it was. Five runs and the bases ahead.....E. Mills flew out to Conard—a handsome catch; Wolters out on a foul fly to Allison; Swandel hit safely for first; Hatfield got first, because Allison, in attempting to forward all and for his little fly; but Eggler, fouled out. A last whitewash and the score is 15 to 12.

There was too much loose fielding on both sides for a first class game. The batting of the Reds was a little the best, and their errors were not as reprehensible as some of those by the Mutuals. The score is as follows:—

Umpire—F. Erby, Chicago. Scorers—H. W. Price and Wm. H. Dougan. Time of game—2 hours and 35 minutes.

Erby's umpirical decisions were so obviously against the F. C's, that it is very doubtful if he will ever be invited to preside here again."

MUTUALS vs. RED STOCKINGS.

THE REDS VICTORIOUS—SCORE 15 TO 12.

The Mutuals played their return game with the Reds on the Union grounds, Cincinnati, on Saturday, July 30th. The recent defeat of the Cincinnati Club by the Athletics and the splendid series of victories of the Mutuals during their tour made the result of the game extremely doubtful to the knowing ones, particularly when it was rumored that George Wright could not play. This last proved false, however, though George is hardly in fit condition for rough play. Fred. Erby, of the Chicago Club, was selected for umpire. The Mutuals won the toss and sent their opponents to the bat, and, at a few minutes after three, the game commenced. The audience was a fine one, though hardly equal to that which witnessed the Athletic game on Wednesday.

First Innings.—George Wright was flied by Swandel. Gould made one bag on a safe drive to centre field. Waterman advanced him to third and took second himself on a splendid corker over third. A wild pitch left in Gould's third. Allison went out at first by hitting to Wolters, Waterman scoring. H. Wright made his base on a safe right-centre stroke. Leonard sent him to third and took first on a grass shaver over second. But Leonard the next moment was caught out at first by a sharp throw of C. Mills—at least the umpire thought so. Two runs.....Hatfield made his base on a feeble one which ran out foul, and stole second. Eggler went out at first on sharp fielding by G. Wright. Patterson got a base by a hard hit through Waterman's fingers, Hatfield taking third. Nelson hit a bounder to Sweasy, and the latter passed it to G. Wright, cutting off Eggler. Nelson got to 2d on a wild pitch, Hatfield scoring, but was left there by E. Mills, who hit to Geo. Wright and was stopped at first. One run.

2. Brainard sent a fly right into McMahon's fingers. Sweasy was beautifully flied by Hatfield after a hard run. McVey was flied by Eggler. A Chicago.....McMahon was handsomely taken on the foul fly by Leonard. E. Mills was served in the same by George Wright. Wolters' fine corker to left gave him a base, but he was cut off at second when Swandel's bounder went to G. Wright and thence to Sweasy. A White Stocking.

3. Geo. Wright was again flied, this time by Hatfield. Gould fouled out. Waterman hit well to left for a base, and a wild pitch sent him to third. Allison's bounder to third, muffed by Nelson, gave him first. H. Wright brought in Waterman and sent Allison to third by a grounder to right field. Both were left by Hatfield capturing Leonard's fly. One run.....McVey gobbled Swandel's fly. Hatfield hit safe for one base and got second on Eggler's hit, who, however, suffered at first by Waterman's fielding. Patterson gave Waterman a foul fly. No run. Score, 3 to 1.

4. Brainard's grounder gave him a base. Sweasy hove up a sky rocket, which E. Mills took. McVey hit a bounder to Hatfield, but the latter held it too long, waiting for Swandel to get on the base. G. Wright hit to Hatfield, who threw to third, instead of first, and no one was put out. Brainard getting home. Gould's long fly was taken by Eggler, McVey coming home. H. Wright then stole second, Waterman, however, left him there, sending a fly to Eggler. Two runs.....Nelson went out at first by G. Wright. E. Mills sent a long fly which was taken in grand style by Leonard. McMahon popped up a foul fly for Waterman. Nine for the Mutes. Score, 5 to 3.

5. Allison hit a bounder over second and took first. H. Wright hit a bounder which Nelson should have fielded, but didn't. Leonard then threw a long drive clear over Eggler, made a home run, thus adding three runs to the score. Brainard tipped out. Sweasy's gave E. Mills a foul fly. McVey hit safe for a base. George Wright drove a corker by Wolters's easy sending Mac to third. Gould sent McVey home and George to third on a drive to centre. Nelson muffed a foul fly sent up by Waterman. Fred then bounded a ball to Hatfield, who cut off Gould at second, G. Wright being left. Four runs.....Hatfield's hit sent him safe for one base. Wolters advanced Pat to third and took first on a safe run to right. Swandel hit to Waterman, who threw badly, and Gould muffed. Hatfield hit clear over Leonard for three bases, with three men in and none out. Eggler fouled out. Patterson flew out to Leonard. A very wild pitch let in Hatfield. Nelson hit safely for first. E. Mills hit a corker to centre, on which Hatfield, who left for home, but, on July 30th, the score began 110 to 1.

THE PICCOTT BENEFIT MATCH ON THE CAPITOLINE GROUNDS.

The contest between the Atlantic nine and a nine selected from the Stars, Eckfords, Alphas and Harmonics, of Brooklyn, for the benefit of the widow of the late Wm. Piccott, took place on the Capitoline grounds, on Tuesday, July 26th. The weather being hot the attendance was not as numerous as it otherwise would have been, but, nevertheless, the sum of $113.45 was taken in at the gate, and, as Messrs. Weed and Decker generously added a check for $50, the nice little sum of $163.45 was paid to Mrs. Piccott by the reporters committee that same night, and the lady gratefully acknowledged her indebtedness to the players and the proprietors of the grounds for their liberal offer of service.

All of the Atlantics were on hand, but the other nine selected did not all put in an appearance though six of them did, and, as good substitutes supplied the places of the absentees, a good nine entered the field against the Atlantics. The game was opened by the Atlantics, who led off with a score of four runs—two of them earned—off Cummings' pitching, the support afforded him not being first class, besides which the ball played with was too lively, and, as the ground was dry and hard, it bounded too high. In the first five innings the Atlantics ran up a score of 18 runs, of which but three were earned, Beavens going in to pitch in the third innings and Lewis in the fifth, Cummings catching. On the picked nine side in these innings not a run was scored, so finely did the Atlantics support the effective pitching of Zettlein. In fact, it was not until the fifth innings that the picked nine secured a single base. In the last four innings, however, they outplayed the Atlantics at the bat, and ran up a score of 9 runs, of which 7 were earned. The final result of the contest, however, was the success of the Atlantics by a score of 29 to 9. The Atlantics were whitewashed in the last innings only, when, for an experiment, Ferguson caught off Cummings' pitching. There were four prizes given by Messrs. Peck & Snyder, which were awarded as follows:—Ferguson won the bat and the ball on the Atlantic side, and J. Hall the bat and Remsen the ball on the picked nine side. The bats were for the most first class base hits, and the balls for the most fly catches, the handsome running catch by Remsen giving him the lead. The umpire satisfactorily discharged his duty, and the game proved to be a very pleasant one. We give the full score below:—

THE CANADA CHAMPIONSHIP.

GUELPH vs. DUNDAS—GUELPH WINS.

A match for the championship of the Dominion was played on the grounds of the Maple Leaf Club, of Guelph, C. W., on the 22d of July, between that club and the Independents, of Dundas. The game caused a good deal of excitement throughout western Canada, and fully 3,000 people assembled within the enclosure at the tariff of 50 cents per head—an innovation in Canada, and one which might be generally followed with advantage. The game was close and exciting throughout, and marked by some superior fielding. At the close of the ninth innings the score stood 18 to 18, and, by mutual consent, a deciding innings was played, in which the Maple Leafs batted for 9 runs to their opponents' 8. The silver ball thus remains in Guelph. The umpire was A. M. Moore, of the Tecumseh Club, of London, and his decisions gave satisfaction to both parties—in itself sufficient praise. The score:—

TOUR OF THE PASTIMES OF BALTIMORE.

THEIR GAMES WITH THE KEYSTONES, ATLANTICS AND STARS.

This club of gentlemanly ball tossers and amateur experts of Baltimore, left their home on Thursday, July 28, on a practice tour eastward, and also to play the return game for the amateur championship with the Stars of Brooklyn, these two organizations being the strongest amateur clubs in the country. The Pastimes stopped in Philadelphia on Thursday, and there played a nine of the Keystone Club, but as the match had been hastily arranged, the full nine of the Keystones did not play, and as those who did take part in the contest did not arrive on the ground until late, only six innings were finished before the time for the departure of the Pastimes arrived, the score of the match standing at 11 to 10 in favor of the Baltimoreans when the game was called. This was not satisfactory to either party as it was only a nominal victory for the Pastimes, and therefore the match is not worth recording. On Friday, July 29th, the Pastimes visited Brooklyn and played with the full nine of the champion Atlantics. It is worthy of remark that the amateurs, though they intended to have presented their full strength on their tour, were unable to do so owing to the inability of their pitcher and short stop to accompany them. They managed to place very able players in, as substitutes, however, as the result of their play has shown:—

The Pastimes entered on this contest under circumstances not calculated to lead to a favorable issue. Their being short handed was one drawback, but the principal obstacle to a close game—they, of course, did not expect a victory—was in their choice of a ball, they presenting one of the lively Harwood balls, which has too much rubber in its composition for the use of skillful players. The Atlantics offered them one of Ross's dead balls, said to have but an ounce of rubber in it, but they refused that, and as the ball they played with proved to be a lively one, the result was that it was knocked about the field by the Atlantics for home runs and three base hits, and badly muffed at times by the Atlantics. It was lively enough too, to nearly break Pearce's jaw at one time, and it completely stunned him at another, both the severe blows being received by him while he attempted to take it sharply from the bat on fly tips. The beauty of the dead ball is that it can be held by the catcher behind on tips sharp from the bat, and the catches from high balls in the in-field are surer, while in the out-field every dead ball which comes to them can be caught by a lively ball as it is different, especially in the cases of high fouls and long, heavy hits, and particularly in regard to hot live balls. No nine containing such a skillful fielding corps and good batsmen as the Pastime, should ever think of playing with a ball having more than an ounce of rubber in it. In this game had they played with a dead ball they would no doubt have been beaten, but not by such a score as they were.

The game opened prettily for a close contest, as the Atlantics led off with high, long balls which the wind prevented from going far into the field, and thereby the out fielders easily got at them. With a high wind, which favors the pitching, ground hits were the only ones likely to secure bases. The close of the third innings saw the tally at 5 to 5, the Pastimes having done some pretty outfielding and some good batting, they getting their runs, which the Atlantics did not. In the 4th and 5th innings, however, the Atlantics, after having given chances for their retirement for singles, the pitching of McDonald proving to be quite effective, went in for some heavy batting, and added no less than 16 runs to their score, while the Pastimes were only permitted to score 4; the close of the 5th innings, during which the Pastimes made a run, saw the Atlantics, with an easy victory secured. This result had a rather despanding effect on the amateurs, who did not play with the same spirit as in the opening part of the game, and in the last four innings they retired without either earning or adding a single run to their score, while the Atlantics added 8 to theirs, of which but two were earned, the final result being the success of the Atlantics by a score of 27 to 9.

Of the play on the Pastime side the fine play of Bailey and Chenowith on taking fly balls in the outfield was praiseworthy. Buck's second base play and that of Lucas at first base, being the feature of their in fielding. Popplein and Southard also did good service in their positions. In fact, all of the nine showed themselves to be first class players, and with a good fair ball they would have given their professional adversaries a good push for victory as the score of runs earned shows. On the Atlantic side Chapman's fine out fielding was noteworty as was the effective play of Pike in the infield, Smith and Pearce also doing service in their positions. In batting Chenowith took a decided lead on the Pastime side and Smith on behalf of the Atlantic. In regard to the home runs made they are unworthy of notice in a game where such are wild throws unusual to them. The batting of the Red Stockings was the better, their score of bases and totals being ahead. The umpiring was manifestly impartial in intention and was principally faulty in that it was too lenient. The score:—

PASTIME vs. STAR.

DEFEAT OF THE STARS.

The victory obtained by the amateur nine of the Pastime Club of Baltimore, over the Stars on Saturday, July 30th, on the Capitoline grounds, in the first defeat the champions have sustained at the hands of an amateur nine this season. The Stars entered upon the game under circumstances well calculated to ensure defeat, for they were not only short handed, but instead of playing the substitute in the substitute's position, they made several important changes which proved to be extremely impolitic. Like the Red Stockings on the Athletics, they lost the game by inferior play in the field, the batting being about even. This contest has shown pretty conclusively that the Stars have yet to learn to play a dead ball game.

The game began at 4 P. M., with the Stars at the bat, and though Dollard hit the ball for three bases, the side was put out minus a run, Lucas, Livingston and Williams making good catches. On the other side not a run was earned, but by a muff of Dollard's, and a dropped fly ball by Johnson—well tried for—Chenowith, who had earned his base got in, good catches by Dollard and a fine one by Manly put the side out. This gave the lead to the Pastimes, 1 to 0. In the 2d innings neither side scored, Livingston making two good foul bound catches at left field, after Cummings had earned his base, Johnson striking out, and Beavens and Ferguson each retired by a fine catch capturing the other two. In the 3d innings the Stars secured one run through a wild throw of Southard, Williams and Buell making a fine play together, and Lucas and Livingston good catches. On the other side, two runs were scored chiefly by the good batting of Buck and Chenowith, Manly, Packer and Rogers putting the dead out.

In the 4th, 5th and 6th innings the Stars did some good batting, by which they ran up their score to 7, they getting two runs each innings. In the 4th and 5th innings the Pastimes were prettily sent to Chicago, but in the 5th they rallied at the bat to the tune of 5 runs. Previous to this the tally stood at 7 to 3 in favor of the Stars, with a favorable promise of success, though they were not playing up to their mark in the field. The result of the 5th innings play, however, materially changed the aspect of the game, as, at its close, the Pastimes stood in the van by the totals of 8 to 7. In these three innings Williams captured six players behind by excellent catches, and McDonald made a good catch. Popplein, Southard, Buck and Lewis likewise doing service in their positions. On the side the Stars made Manly's fine play at third, in taking high fly balls, was the feature. Dollard also making three good catches and Clyne one. The game now became very interesting, and it was quite exciting when the Stars went into their ninth innings with the totals of 9 to 8 against them. By excellent fielding, in support of very effective pitching, the Stars were disposed of in their last three innings for blank scores. Jewell, Rogers and Manly alone scoring bases on hits, and that only in the 8th innings.

In this innings the Stars placed their men as they should have done at first, and the result was that the Pastimes were whitewashed in their seventh and eighth innings, Jewell playing well behind. In the last innings, but for errors by Rogers and Cummings, the Pastimes would have been "Chicagoed," instead of which they added two runs to their score. The last innings was marked by a splendid catch by Bailey—the winning catch—and two very finely taken balls by Beavens. The final result was the success of the Pastimes by a score of 10 to 7 runs made, and 5 to 3 earned. The umpiring was very satisfactory, and the game was played in a very friendly spirit. It is clear the two nines mutually cheered each other in the good old amateur style. This contest all amateur nines should keep up when they play with each other. The ball played with was one of Peck & Snyder's red dead balls. In batting Jewell and Dollard took the lead on the Star side, and Chenowith and Buell on the other. We append the full score:—

REMARKABLY CLOSE CONTEST.

The Dauntless but Little Over an Hour Behind.

LOGS OF THE COMPETING VESSELS.

RECEPTION BY NEW YORK YACHTSMEN.

SUBSEQUENT MOVEMENTS OF THE YACHTS

The great oceanic trial of speed between those triumphs of skill in the art of yacht building, the Cambria, owned by James Ashbury, Commodore of the Royal Harwick Yacht Club, of London, Eng., and the Dauntless, owned by James Gordon Bennett, Jr., Vice Commodore of the New York Club, which for weeks past has excited among all classes an interest never before manifested in any similar event, is now over, and victor and vanquished have been duly honored by admiring thousands. The culminating point was reached on Wednesday, July 27th, on the afternoon of which day the Cambria arrived at her destination, the lightship at Sandy Hook, in advance, though her gallant owner has good reason to congratulate himself upon his narrow escape from defeat, as the Dauntless reached the goal scarcely more than an hour after ward. The result caused intense disappointment to our people, who had felt the utmost confidence that the white sails of the American representative would be first discerned from the objective point; but the defeat was received generally in a philosophical manner, consolation being derived from the fact that the contest was so very close and that the conqueror had so little cause to "brag" about the victory of his yacht. The most remarkable thing in connection with the contest is the fact that two vessels starting upon a race across the Atlantic's waste of waters, taking entirely opposite courses, which prevented their sighting each other from the day of starting until the completion of the race, encountering different winds and baffling with the billows for twenty-three days, during which about three thousand miles were sailed over, they should reach the end of the voyage within so short a period of each other. It is something entirely without precedent, and which will probably never be paralleled in the future.

SKETCH OF THE YACHTS.

The Cambria is the property of Mr. Jas. Ashbury, was built by Ratsey, of Cowes, and was launched in May, 1868. Her measurement, according to the rules of the New York Club, is 248 tons, but she is rated 358 tons, Thames measurement, which is described thus in the rules of the Royal Thames Club:—

The length shall be taken in a straight line at the deck from the fore part of the stem to the after part of the sternpost, from which, deducting the breadth, the remainder shall be esteemed the just length to find the tonnage, and the breadth shall be taken from the outside of the outside plank in the broadest part of the yacht; then multiply the breadth so taken by the length and the product by half the breadth, and dividing the whole by 94; the quotient shall be deemed the true tonnage.

Her dimensions are as follows:—Length from stern to stern post, 108 feet; beam, 21 feet; tonnage for racing, 199 tons; draft of water, 12 feet. The dimensions of her principal spars are:—Mainmast (bounds to deck), 61 feet; foremast, 56 feet 6 inches; main boom, 56 feet; main gaff, 33 feet 9 inches; fore gaff, 25 feet; bowsprit, 36 feet outside of stem; maintopmast, 35 feet 6 inches; foretopmast, 32 feet 3 inches; maintopsail yard, 32 feet, and foretopsail yard, 29 feet. The construction of her hull is faultless; her lines are beautifully fine. She is built of oak, with teak topsides; scantling, 7 inches by 4 inches. Her interior fittings are of polished walnscot work, and are remarkable for their neatness and the good taste displayed in their decoration and arrangement. Two one tons of lead were melted and run into her, in addition to which she has about four tons of lead bolted on her keel. Her first appearance as a racing craft was on the 2d of June, 1868, when she had for competitors the Egeria (152 tons), Gloriana (132 tons), and Fleur de Lis (100 tons). In this race the Cambria was the first to reach the winning post, but lost the prize, having to allow her smaller opponents time for difference in tonnage. On the 17th of the same month she came on for the Thames against all the celebrated cutters, and it would have been a matter for surprise had she been otherwise than beaten, when sailing against such vessels in fresh water and on a river not half a mile wide at many points. Her next race was on the 30th of June, from the Nore to Dover, and in this match the Condor, a new cutter of the largest class, beat her, as did the same vessel in a match between six and seven thousand feet of canvas. Her rigging is of Italian hemp and galvanized iron. She measures 116-00 feet on the water line, and 130.70 on deck. Her depth of hold is 9.70 feet and breadth of beam 34.80 feet. Her present tonnage is 237.96 tons and her area 2,890 square feet, and is entitled to carry a crew of thirty-seven. The Dauntless entered in the Channel race for yachts of all nations, from Cherbourg round the Nab Light and back, for a cup of the value of 2,500 francs, given by the Emperor of the French, in prize for the second vessel valued at 1,000 francs and a gold medal. About an hour after the start, the Dauntless carried away her foretopmast, bringing down her lore foregaff topsail. This misfortune of course diminshed her chance of winning the race, and, although thus disabled, she would have been entitled in retiring from the contest, but she nevertheless kept on her course, and after all others had finished, being beaten only by the Guinivere and Egeria; the former taking the first prize. This was about the only race in which the Dauntless was engaged since her advent in Great Britian. The Dauntless was again overhauled at Cowes last April in preparation for the ocean race. She was newly coppered, and her foremast was placed four feet a.t, and underwent some other alterations.

HOW THE MATCH WAS MADE.

Subsequent to the victory of the Cambria over the celebrated Sappho, Mr. Ashbury, on October 3d, 1868, issued a challenge to all America, the yacht accepting to participate in the Thames Club Regatta during the following August, and then the Cambria and her to race across the ocean from Cowes to Sandy Hook, starting Sept. 1st of said year—a race to afterwards take place between them around Long Island for the Queen's Cup, which the America won in 1851. Mr. Bennett promptly accepted the challenge to race across the Atlantic from Cowes to Sandy Hook, or from Cowes to the Azores and back, or any other course less than 3,000 miles in length, for a piece of plate valued at £250. Innumerable letters were written by them in the effort to come to some agreement, Mr. Bennett declining to race in inland waters, columns upon columns being filled with the voluminous correspondence, until it appeared as though any satisfactory arrangement was altogether out of the question. Fortunately, however, matters were brought to a favorable climax by the appended cable telegrams, which swept away all difficulties:—

To Mr. Bennett, New York.—I unreservedly retire and waive the question of the four Channel or inland courses, and will race Dauntless from Cowes to New York any time in March or July, to suit your convenience, for £250 service. Ashbury.

New York, Dec. 19th, 1868.

To Mr. Ashbury, Brighton.—Will you or will you not sail the Dauntless in accordance with my acceptance of your challenge of September 27th, starting point being Old Head of Kinsale, not Cowes? July equally agreeable. Bennett.

Brighton, Dec. 25th, 1868.

To Mr. Bennett, New York.—Have been absent; returned last night. The Cambria will unconditionally race the Dauntless any time in July, from Old Head of Kinsale to Sandy Hook or New York for £250 plate. Nevertheless, I cannot admit your acceptance of challenge of September 27th, seeing you absolutely refused four out of five races and changed the course of the 5th. The inconvenience and disadvantage of a start from the Irish coast, as compared with Cowes, I unreservedly agree to, to prevent the possibility of the race being once more off. No reply necessary. Ashbury.

New York, Dec. 27th, 1868.

To Mr. Ashbury, Brighton.—Your telegram satisfactory, and, as you say any time in July, I name the 4th of July as the day of starting, if agreeable to you. Other preliminaries, of course, can be arranged upon my arrival in England June next. Please answer if this meets your approval. Bennett.

Brighton, Dec. 25d, 1869.

To Mr. Bennett, New York.—The unconditional race, Cambria against Dauntless, for the 4th of July, is quite acceptable. Ashbury.

By mutual agreement the place of starting was changed from Old Head of Kinsale to Daunt's Rock, on the coast of Ireland, and on the 25th day of June last the competitors sailed from Cowes to Queenstown. On July 2d the owners of the respective vessels were entertained at a banquet given by the Royal Cork Yacht Club, and at half past twelve o'clock M., on July 4th, the Cambria and the Dauntless proceeded down the bay towards the Rock, accompanied by a large number of yachts, steamers, etc., crowded with ladies and gentlemen, who seemed full of enthusiasm, while the sympathies of the majority were with the American vessel. The gentlemen chosen as starters were members of the Royal Cork Yacht Club, and at 2.34 P. M. the signal was given, and the antagonists, being cast loose, speedily bounded away upon their long journey across Neptune's broad domain, amid the cheers of the spectators, waving of handkerchiefs, the strains of a brass band, and other demonstrations of enthusiasm, exercising a cheering effect upon those on board of the fleet ocean coursers. The Cambria got under headway quickest, but when last sighted on that day the Dauntless was a quarter of a mile to windward, and so far everything was in her favor—a circumstance which, though so small a portion of the journey had been traversed, was regarded as not without significance.

On June 28th a cable dispatch, reading as follows, was received:—"In passing vessels at night the Dauntless will burn blue signal lights in the bow and stern and will throw up three blue rockets in quick succession. The Cambria will burn red signal lights and throw up red rockets. Vessels falling in with the yachts will confer a favor on the owners by reporting the fact for publication on their arrival in York." From this it was expected that intelligence would frequently be received from the racers, through the instrumentality of vessels passing one way or the other, but we were disappointed save in a couple of instances. The first information the expectant ones obtained was contained in a telegram from Glasgow, Scotland, dated July 13th, stating that the steamship Sidonian, which arrived that day from New York, passed the Cambria at noon on the 9th, in latitude 54 deg. 30 min. and longitude 26 deg. 38 min. The Cambria was standing W. N. W., and had a light easterly breeze. Her competitor, the Dauntless, was not seen. On July 24th a telegram was received from London, to the effect that the Dauntless was spoken in latitude 43 N., longitude 36 W. on the 13th. No other report was received until July 26th, when the steamship Ville de Paris arrived, the officers of which stated that, at 11 o'clock on the previous night, they had sighted a yacht which threw up one blue rocket and showed two blue signal lights, and as those were the colors to be used by the Cambria, it was supposed to be her. The distance was about two hundred miles from New York. The publication of this news in the morning papers of the 27th inst., coupled with the announcement that if the weather favored her, as was thought to be the case, the Cambria would arrive during that day, set the public more agog than ever with excitement, and the crowds which had gathered at Sandy Hook, Coney and Staten islands, or went down the bay in steamers and yachts for days previous, in hopes of "being in at the death," were largely augmented. The Dauntless had not been sighted, but being probable that she was in advance of the English vessel, as nearly everybody hoped, it was thought likely that she would bowl past the lightship ere noon. On the 9th ult. the Commodore of the N. Y. Y. C. issued a circular, which read as follows:—

Sir.—I am directed by the Commodore of the New York Yacht Club to suggest to the owners of yachts belonging to the squadron that, in view of the arrival of the Dauntless and the Cambria in our waters from observations taken on the 9th inst., rendering it probable that the latter vessel comes as the representative of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, to contest for the future possession of the "Queen's" Cup, that it would be proper, provided the contingencies governing the arrival would realize that hope, that a large or a number as possible of the vessels of the New York Yacht Squadron should rendezvous in the vicinity of the club house, between the 20th and 25th of the month, at Clifton, S. I., for the purpose of meeting and welcoming the said vessel.

I am also instructed to invite the vessels belonging to the various yacht clubs in and around the harbor of New York to unite in such demonstration of welcome as may be considered proper in the place and on the day above named. Arrangements are being made to receive intelligence from Sandy Hook when either of the said vessels are first sighted from the Light Ship, or the Highlands of Neversink, which will be promptly announced by hoisting the flag of the Royal Thames, and that of the New York Club, under the American Ensign, at the City Hall, and by firing minute signal guns from the park, three for the Dauntless, if she is ahead, and two for the Cambria, should fortune favor that vessel. I am, sir, &c.,

H. Morton, Sec. N. Y. Y. C.

This request was very generally responded to favorably by the owners of yachts belonging to the N. Y. Y. C., as also those of the Brooklyn and Atlantic clubs, as well as others, the majority anchoring off the club house during the day time and cruising in the vicinity at night; consequently, for days prior to the arrival of the racers, the scene presented by the large fleet of white winged aquatic coursers was such as had seldom, if ever before, been witnessed upon the waters of the bay. Never before was such profound interest—an interest perfectly absorbing in its nature—exhibited in a race of this description by Americans—not even when the America won the Queen's cup in 1851, or when the Fleetwing, Fleetwing and Vesta inaugurated yacht racing across the ocean by their memorable contest from Sandy Hook to Cowes, for the princely stake of $90,000, in December, 1866. Yachtmen, one and all, were upon the alert, and at an early hour schooners and sloops left their anchorage and headed for the Hook, while the ferry boats plying between the city and Staten Island, as also the steamboats running to Sandy Hook, the Highlands, Coney Island, Far Rockaway, etc., were thronged with persons, who, by the earnestness with which they discussed the subject and the readiness with which they wagered their money, in amounts large and small, upon the result, conclusively proved how deeply interested they were in the prolonged and hazardous trial then drawing to a close. Among them were many ladies, who appeared equally concerned in regard to the issue as were their cavaliers, eagerly questioning them and listening attentively to the opinions expressed with such an air of profound wisdom, as these fresh water sailors and landsmen drew upon their wealth of nautical lore. The squad of newspaper reporters and others who for days and nights previous had inhabited the Hook, unwillingly enduring the onslaughts of pestiferous mosquitos, eyetormenting sand flies and exhilarating wood ticks, that they might have the honor of being numbered among those who first discerned the winning yacht as she appeared above the distant horizon, was greatly increased during the morning, the following telegrams adding to the excitement and inducing many to take a "day off":—

Long Branch, July 2/th—10 A. M.

A yacht is now passing off here. Has a pair of sticks. She looks like the Dauntless. She is sailing with a jib sheet on her mainsail spar.

Long Branch, July 27th, 1870.

The yacht which recently passed this point, and which was supposed to be the Dauntless, proves to be the English yacht Algeria (?). Neither the Dauntless nor the Cambria has, as yet, been heard from.

Bay Shore, L. I., July 27th—1.18 P. M.

One of the yachts off Fire Island.

Sandy Hook, July 27th, 1870.

Four and a/t schooner signalled by Ville de Paris may prove to be Dauntless. Have ordered her to run for the Cambria to burn two red lights and throw three red rockets; Dauntless, blue lights and three blue rockets. Wind west northwest, now hauling to westward. If the Cambria is to the northward, she has almost a dead beat; if she was to the lightship. If the Dauntless is to the southward, she has almost a free wind.

While these dispatches exercised a bewildering effect upon the public mind, everybody seemed impressed with the belief that they at least foreshadowed an early termination of the great yachting event of 1870, and hundreds of patient and vigilant watchers every few minutes most long, eager, searching glances across the waste of waters. The morning was very warm and the rays of the glowing orb above shown with fervid heat upon the unprotected heads of those gathered upon the beach, the heated sand by no means increasing their comfort; but shortly before noon the sky became overclouded, a strong breeze, increasing each minute sprang up, the waters of old ocean threatening very soon to howl, and everything indicated a storm. Taking the hint, the crews of the different yachts cruising about the Hook and in the lower bay retreated to safer quarters; while vessels outward bound took necessary precautions to weather the impending conflict of the elements. About one o'clock the squall burst and the lightship tossed and plunged amid the angry waters lashing her sides, while a drizzling rain commenced to descend, to the infinite disgust of those unfortunate mortals who were without protection. Luckily, however, the storm was of short duration, and an hour later the face of Old Sol strugged through the mass of breaking clouds—a most welcome visitant. The day was now wearing on and the impatience of the watchers increased as time passed. Those on board the lightship ever and anon anxiously questioned Capt. Cosgrove, as he gazed through his telescope toward the eastern horizon, concerning the receipt of his observations; but again and again was the reply unsatisfactory, until at last the anxiety became absolutely painful.

THE CAMBRIA WINS.

Half an hour or less later, however, the anxiety was relieved by the announcement by the bronzed and weather-beaten captain, after taking another long, lingering look through his glass, which for a week previous had done excellent service, that strange square sails were discernable above the horizon. Instantly all was excitement, and pressing forward the crowd overwhelmed him with questions, all to the same point, however; that being whether or not he thought it was one of the international racers. He could not venture to say, but after looking once more he lowered the glass and remarked that it was not a yankee vessel, certainly not the Dauntless, and that though he could not make out her flag he believed it was the Cambria. All hands now took an observation of the approaching vessel, which was rapidly coming into full view, her course being direct for the light ship. A few moments later and her flag was plainly visible, and that it was in reality the Cambria was an established fact—a fact which brought with it bitter disappointment, but yet offered the welcome relief from the unbearable suspense which had tortured those so anxiously waiting for the verdict. On she came, her immense white sails filled by the stiff breeze, bounding with great strides over and through the high-running sea toward the goal, and presenting a most beautiful spectacle, with her dark, shapely hull and cloud of canvas. When a few rods from the light ship Miss Catherine and Mary crossed her bow, her crew cheering heartily, which salutation was responded to by the white-shirted and red-capped heroes of the English schooner. Directly she reached the lightship, when another rousing cheer arose from those on board, returned as heartily by the Britishers. As she swept by, Mr. Ashbury, trumpet in hand, inquired whether the Dauntless had arrived, to which Capt. Cosgrove replied negatively. One can imagine the feelings of Mr. Ashbury and all on board the English vessel upon the receipt of this intelligence, nd that it was most welcome was attested by the ringing cheer which burst spontaneously from their throats. The red flag was hoisted over the ship and those at a distance were made aware that the oceanic race was at an end, and that the pride of American yachtmen had been defeated by he: distinguished rival from "Merry England." Shortly after passing the stranger met and was saluted by the Tidal Wave and Phantom, which had been cruising outside the Hook. They escorted her from there to her anchorage off Stapleton Landing, S. I., being joined on the way by numerous other vessels, the occupants of each giving her a most cordial welcome. It was a continued ovation all the way up the bay, craft of all kinds moving towards the fleet and greeting her with lusty cheers and salvos of artillery as they drew near. On the Quarantine dock and at Clifton and Stapleton, S. I., crowds of people were congregated, who renewed the demonstrations of welcome as the victorious yacht appeared in view.

Having cast anchor, surrounded by the principal vessels of the N. Y. Y. C., as likewise numerous yachts belonging to other clubs, Commodore Stebbins boarde her and paid his respects to Commodore Ashbury, tendering him the hospitalities of the club. The captains of the different vessels then went on board and congratulated him upon his victory. Mr. Ashbury receiving them with the utmost cordiality, and wearing with becoming modesty the laurels he had won. Then the Cambria was crowded by yachtsmen, who inspected, with true Yankee curiosity, everything above and below her deck.

LOG OF THE DAUNTLESS.

July 5th.—Course, S.W. ¼ W. Distance run 103 miles. Lat., 50 22; lon., 9.45 W. At 12.30 P. M. on the 4th the Dauntless got under way and was towed out to Daunt's Rock, a distance of about 3 miles, by the tugboat United States. A second tugboat, with the yacht Gwendoline, and a number of steamers and small craft accompanied her. Passed and left Daunt's Rock at 2.30 and took position about two cables length to leeward of the Cambria. At 2.33, H. M. S. S. Mayflower hoisted the private signal of the Royal Yacht Squadron, and fired a blue light and blue peter as the first signal; five minutes afterwards the first gun was fired, and again, two minutes later, in obedience to the second and final gun, the Dauntless cast off the tug and stood away on the starboard tack. At 3 P. M. found ourselves drawing ahead and the Cambria backing astern. The Cambria tacked in shore to avoid weathering on the Cambria. BASE BALL.

TOUR OF THE MUTUAL CLUB.

MUTUAL vs. WHITE STOCKINGS.

The Chicago Club Defeated by the Extraordinary Score of 9 to 0.

A BRILLIANT FIELDING DISPLAY.

The result of the game between the Mutuals, of New York, and the White Stockings, of the Garden City, was given last week, and we are now enabled to place before our readers a full report, written by our regular correspondent:—

The base ball aspirants of Chicago have at last received a severe check, and a gentle air of sadness now hangs over this once ambitious city. The exultant spirit, formerly so marked a characteristic of her citizens, has given place to a decided depression, owing to the fact that the Mutuals, on July 23d, again defeated the White Stockings by a score almost without a parallel in the record of matches between first class clubs. The supreme confidence evidenced in the ability of their nine by the majority of the Chicago people previous to the game seemed to an unprejudiced observer scarcely warranted by the club's past career; yet, notwithstanding the striking disparity in the scores on the occasion of their first meeting with the New Yorkers, odds were freely offered upon the Chicago club's success in the game in question. The surrounding circumstances of the match were most favorable. The grounds of the Chicagos, at Dexter Park, a short distance out of the city, rank among the best in the country, and certainly, as regards smoothness and quality of the sward, completeness and solidity of seating arrangements and general perfection of details, leave little to be desired. An ample police force secured the players entire freedom from interruption, though the crowd in attendance, which numbered upwards of 5,000, was very orderly, and the applause was distributed impartially.

The game opened promptly at 2.50 P. M., with the White Stockings in the field and Hatfield at the bat, who struck a sharp grounder to Hodes, took first through the latter's muff, stole second and reached third on passed ball. Eggler's high foul was cared for by Craver, and Patterson, sending the ball towards third base, was retired by Meyerie's accurate throw to first. Hatfield tallied. Nelson took a base on called balls, and stole to second, but was left there, E. Mills going out by a weak strike in front of home plate. On the Chicago side, McAtee was induced by that dangerous Wolters to strike at one of his peculiar high balls, which naturally went straight up and settled in Hatfield's hands, the latter player also disposing of Hodes by passing his weak grounder to Mills. Patterson took in Wood's fly and closed the innings for the Garden City.

The play in the next four innings was the sharpest ever seen in Chicago, and resulted in mutual blanks. In the second Meyerie's fine base throwing forced a whitewash on the Mutuals, and secured him a deserved round of applause. In the fifth this player made the only first base hit thus far secured by the Chicagos, and in fact carried off the honors of the day on his side, such as they were. The general play of the Mutuals during this part of the game (as, indeed, through the entire match) was so uniformly excellent in the field as to debar special mention; yet, if the names of any players were cited, Patterson's could be first. Burns showed his presence of mind in the third innings by cleverly grasping the ball dropped by Craver at home plate and touching out Hatfield, who in his hasty run from third missed landing on his final base; the whole was so quickly done that few besides the umpire saw the point involved. Over one-half of the game had now been played, with the score kept down to the remarkable figures of 1 to 0, and appearances indicated that this might rival the closeness of the famous 4 to 2 Red Stocking-Mutual match.

These anticipations, however, met with disappointment. Wolters opened the sixth innings with the best hit of the game, sending Cuthbert's bounder over the left field fence and reaching third base, from thence home by Swandel's safe liner. Cuthbert took Hatfield's fly. Eggler's grounder gave him first and Swandel third, the latter vacating that base for Eggler and going in on passed ball. Craver fastened on Patterson's foul bound, but gave Eggler a run through a wild throw to Burns at home plate. E. Mills' foul was beautifully taken by Craver scarcely an inch from the bat, and the side was out with a handsome addition to their score, the game standing 4 to 0. In the next three innings the Chicagos fully maintained their previous average, their score looking as blank as the faces of their supporters. The seventh brought the Mutuals no advantage, but in the eighth they secured three runs, two only being earned. Patterson added to his laurels by making a superb one-handed catch in the ninth innings of Wolters' running backwards—one of those lucky plays not often successful. The success of the Mutuals was now assured, and they opened the ninth innings with the confidence of victory. Wolters reached first through McAtee's muff of Hodes' short throw, and took third on a passed ball; in the meantime Swandel struck a hot one to Meyerie, which he was unable to hold, giving the former first. Hodes sent Hatfield's grounder to Craver, and he to McAtee, this fine double play retiring the striker and Swandel. Wolters tallied during the skirmish. McAtee's muff gave Eggler two bases, a passed ball and wild pitch sending him home. Side out with two unearned runs. The White Stockings now seemed to have lost all hope and failed to improve the last opportunity of retrieving their fallen fortunes. Craver and McAtee struck out, Hatfield secured E. Mills taking Burns' foul fly, and thus closed one of the most extraordinary games recorded in the annals of base ball.

The play of the Mutuals, though not remarkably effective at the bat (earning but five runs), was perfect in the field, a reference to the score showing that nineteen flys fell into their hands, and there remained for a season. Whether their superior fielding was not somewhat in the nature of a pleasant surprise to themselves it is hard to tell; it certainly had a bewildering effect on the majority of the spectators present, who, previous to this saddening experience, had somehow been led to believe that these eastern players occupied a medium rank—were indeed a very fair club, but unable to successfully compete with the Chicagos on their own stamping ground. It is perhaps needless to state that the above expressed opinion has lately been "revised and corrected." The weakness of the White Stockings at the bat was painfully apparent, though their fielding game was not far behind the Mutuals. The former club has now learned by a bitter defeat that the popping up style of striking—effective though it may be with country clubs—will not do to adopt when playing with first class organizations. Let them profit by this wholesome lesson, and they will yet rank with our strongest nines. The umpire, Mr. Bouse, of Cleveland, though rather lenient in calling balls, gave entire satisfaction by his correct decisions. Below is the score:—

As intense interest is manifested in this extraordinary game, in addition to the above special report for the CLIPPER we here give the details of innings from the Chicago Tribune:—

First Innings.—Hatfield hit squarely at one of Burns' swift twisters, but only succeeded in sqinaing it along the smooth in-field direct to Hodes, who muffed it, and the striker got his first. He stole second, and gained third on a passed ball. Eggler, after sending three or four fouls to the right and back, tripped a high one to Craver's certain grasp, and retired for the first out. Patterson's hot grounder was cleanly scooped up by Meyerie at third, and beautifully thrown to McAtee at first, and another man was out. Hatfield came in from third before the play, scoring an unearned run. Nelson took his base on called balls, stealing second. Ed. Mills punched one just in front of the plate, and Burns cared for him, Nelson being left on second. One run, where a whitewash should have been scored.

McAtee was the batting novice, and began his aggravating high delivery, and at last succeeded in coaxing Mack to hit a ball which ought to have been called, and it went straight up for Hatfield to capture. Hodes sent a weak grounder to Hatfield, and retraced his steps before half the distance to first base was covered. Wood waited for a fair one until two balls had been called, struck savagely to left field, and saw Patterson close his hands upon it. For all there were no runs for the home club, the crowd manifested its impartiality and admiration of "pretty work" by giving the Mutuals a hearty round of applause.

2. Martin and Charlie Mills both tested Meyerie's capacity for stinging grounders, and both retired in consequence. Wolters popped a high one to short centre, which Wood ran backward for, falling down in the endeavor to get under it, and the striker made first. Swandel established the fact that Meyerie could "keep a doing of it," by sending Wolters out at second by Eggler to Hodes. Side out for a whitewash. Loud and prolonged cheers for Meyerie, whereat the latter perceptibly smiled.....Cuthbert squared himself for a long hit to left field, only to see the ball taken by Patterson. Flynn gave C. Mills a foul bound, and Tracy accommodated the other Mills with an easy fly. No run.

3. Swandel tipped an awkward foul fly, which Craver reached for and secured in one hand in a manner peculiarly his own. Hatfield's grounder was muffed by Wood, and he reached first. Eggler bounded one to Meyerie, and was out to a certainty. Hatfield, who was off with the latter on the hit, reached second, and Eggler third. Patterson's fly to Wood was a fly. No run..... McAtee put a hot bounder in Nelson's vicinity and was sent back. Hodes' turf scraper was slowly handled by Nelson, but the throw to first was swift and true enough to make it up. Wood gave a fly to Eggler. No run.

4. Hatfield reached his base on a safe hit to short centre, but was forced out at second by Eggler's hot bounder to Meyerie. Patterson rolled one swiftly along the base line to left, reached second, and helped Eggler to third. Nelson took advantage of the opening between Hodes and Wood, made first, carried Eggler in, and Patterson to third. E. Mills hit safely past third, taking his base, and bringing Patterson home and Nelson to third. Martin sent up a fly for Hodes, who overthrew to first to catch E. Mills off, and helped that person to third and Nelson in. C. Mills fly to centre was well taken by Tracy, E. Mills being left on third. Three runs—but two earned..... Cuthbert's hot grounder was muffed by Nelson, and he reached first. He then attempted to steal second, and was caught by a beautiful throw by C. Mills to Hatfield. Flynn hit safely to left for his base. Tracy's fly to right was well run for, and to the astonishment of everybody who knows his tendencies, Martin captured it. Meyerie gave Hatfield an easy fly, and the side was out again for a blank score, Flynn being left on first.

5. Thoroughly elated over the positive certainty of a tremendous victory, the Mutuals went confidently to the bat. Wolters' grounder was well stopped by Hodes, but he threw short to McAtee and the base was reached safely. Swandel gave Meyerie a hot one and he muffed it—the first error in the game for him. Wolters got third on a passed ball. Hatfield's grounder to Hodes resulted in a fine double play, both Swandel and the striker being retired by Hodes to Wood and he to McAtee. Wolters tallied on the play. Eggler reached second on a muff by McAtee (his first) from Wood, going to third on a passed ball, and adding his run on a wild pitch by Burns. Patterson struck to Hodes and was retired at first. Side out with two runs—neither earned. The case was hopeless now for the White Stockings, who seemed to have given up all idea of scoring a single run. Craver and McAtee each gave Hatfield an easy fly, and Burns went out on a fouled fly to C. Mills. Thus closed, at 5.10, a game which has no parallel—a game in which a club, made up of confessedly strong batters, suffered nine consecutive whitewashes. The crowd took it generously, and the absence of hisses or expressions of contempt for the club's ignoble defeat was especially noticeable.

THE TOUR OF THE HARVARD CLUB.

THE HARVARDS IN ST. LOUIS.

The Harvard Club visited St. Louis, July 23d, and on the afternoon of that day played with the Union Club at the St. Louis Base Ball Park. Owing to some misunderstanding between the two clubs, in regard to the time when the game was to be called, the members of the Union did not arrive on the field until 4 o'clock. Unluckily the Harvards had arranged to leave on the 5.15 train for Chicago. This, of course, made the proposed game short, only one innings being terminated. The game was called at 4.10 by the umpire, Mr. W. Kennon, of the Olympic Base Ball Club, of Carondelet, and during his short term of office in this game he acquitted himself in his usual creditable manner. The Union were winning the toss, went to the field; the Harvards the bat. Eustis, on a low grounder, made his first. Wells out on first by Easton, assisted by Greenleaf. Prim got his base on called balls. Eustis came home on a passed ball by W. Wolf. Prim stole home on a passed ball. Bush attempted to steal home but was put out at the "plate" by Turner. Austin, Smith and Willard scored each a run. White was put out on first, closing the innings with a total score of 5 runs.....Turner took his base on called balls. Gorman knocked a low one to second base, which was held and thrown to first, putting Turner and Gorman both out by this beautiful but easy and mechanical double play of the Harvards. Easton got first on a swift grounder to centre. Stanberry out at first, leaving Easton on second, and adding the last 0 for a whitewash; terminating the first innings with a score of 5 to 0 in favor of the Harvards. The second innings was not completed on account of the hastened departure of the Harvards. The Harvards had 9 runs with two men out and two on bases, when the captain of their nine called them from the field, there ending the game.

The crowd being a little displeased at the sudden termination of the game, Clay Sexton, assisted by some members of the Empire Club, made up a picked nine composed of the best players on the ground, including, we believe, some members of the Lone Star B. B. C., of New Orleans. The bat thrown down by the Harvards was taken up by this undaunted picked nine, and the Union found them some true base ball metal. This impromptu match was quite interesting, and the spectators were highly pleased with it.

HARVARD vs. CHICAGO.

THE HARVARDS VICTORIOUS.

In Chicago the defeat of the White Stockings by the Green Stockings and the Mutuals, and the effect of the beating sustained by the Chicago professionals at the hands of the amateur collegians, which occurred July 26th, at Dexter Park, was by no means flattering, as the following description of the game exhibits:—

THE GAME.

The contest took place in the presence of less than 2,000 people, the Chicago citizens apparently having lost interest in their formerly "pet" nine. Owing to a sore hand, Meyerie played at right field, Cuthbert taking third, Flynn, centre field, and Tracy left, after C. Mills of the Mutual Club—who were present in a body—had been selected as umpire, the Harvards, having lost the toss, were sent to the bat for the

First Innings.—Eustis led off at the bat and took his first on called balls, reaching third and then home on successive passed balls. Burns was pitching and that fact alone Craver could not have stopped his balls. Wells struck short to Burns, and was retired at first. Perrin's grounder was slowly handled by Cuthbert, but a quick throw to McAtee got him after all. Bush went out on a foul bound to Craver. One run for the Harvards, thanks to Burns.....McAtee dubbed an easy bounder to the pitcher and resumed his seat. Hodes put a safe grounder to centre field and got first. Wood gave Bush a foul fly. Cuthbert rolled the ball gently to the base-man, and the side was out for a whitewash, Hodes being left on second.

2. Austin popped up an easy fly to Burns. Goodwin struck out, and Thorp tipped a high foul fly to Craver. No run.....Flynn saved the fielders any trouble by sending a grounder direct to Perrin, at first. Tracy did likewise for Reynolds, at third, and had no running to do. Meyerie left no chance for him to run.....Craver got a good hit to centre field, which gave him first, and a passed ball took him to second. Cuthbert's bounder to Reynolds was badly thrown and he got first. Wood reaching third on the same play. Craver scored on a passed ball. Cuthbert getting to third at the same time. Flynn sent another grounder to Reynolds, who again threw badly to first, whereby it was reached. Cuthbert being so absorbed that he neglected to come in from third. Tracy tried Reynolds once more, the latter throwing to second for Flynn, but White muffed it and the bases were full. Meyerie hit a hot one to White, who muffed it, and threw quickly and well to first, retiring the striker. McAtee's fine throw to third to get Austin, who arrived at the bag nearly as soon as the ball, owing to Austin's fleetness of foot, really seemed as though the bad state of nervous demoralization which the college lads manifested was about to lose them the game after all. Judgment and strategy saved the day for them. Finding that Goodwin was growing wilder and weaker every moment, Captain Bush relieved him, White going behind the bat and Goodwin to second base. Bush is the slowest of all slow pitchers, and the sudden change settled the business. Had the same tactics been pursued in the recent game between the Harvards and Red Stockings, when, in the ninth innings, the latter must make 5 to tie and 6 to win, the Harvards would unquestionably have won the game. Craver made a weak strike to Bush and was put out at first. When Burns stood at the bat Tracy stole to from third, and Meyerie, running from second, was declared out by White to Reynolds—a wrong decision of the umpire, it was strenuously asserted. Burns struck out and the game was at an end, with a victory for the Harvards by a score of 11 to 6. A careful analysis of the foregoing description of the game will not fail to establish the fact that the score of runs earned stands —Harvards, 1; Chicago, 0. Below is the score:—

NEW YORK VS. BROOKLYN.—The grand match between picked nines of New York and Brooklyn, which has been arranged for the benefit of the family of the late Mr. Pigott, will take place on the Union Grounds, Brooklyn, on Saturday next, Aug. 6th. This game promises to be one of the finest contests of the season, as Ferguson, of the Atlantics, will catch from Cummings' pitching, with a strong field strengthened on behalf of Brooklyn, and Mills and Wolters on the part of New York. The following will be the two nines:—

Brooklyn.	Position.	New York.
Ferguson	Catcher.	C. Mills.
Cummings	Pitcher.	Wolters.
Start	1st Base.	E. Mills.
Bush	2d Base.	Hatfield.
Reilly	3d Base.	Nelson.
Pearce	Short Stop.	Burdock.
Rogers	Left Field.	Patterson.
Worth	Centre Field.	Fisler.
Snyder	Right Field.	Martin.

There will be a substitute from each of the principal clubs in case of emergency, but all of the above players have engaged to be present. Great interest is being manifested to see Ferguson catch behind Cummings.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP FIGHT

BETWEEN

JIM MACE AND TOM KING,

FOR £400 AND THE BELT.

Fought on the 28th of January, 1862.

Mace Wins in 43 Rounds, 68 Minutes.

Having given, in our issue of last week, an account of the battle between Tom King and John C. Heenan, we now present particulars of the first encounter between the former and Jim Mace, for £300 a side and the champion belt of England, which possesses greater interest just now than ever, as Mace forms a prominent character in our midst. It will be remembered, with pleasure, by many, the fact that it will enable our readers to form a better estimate or the capabilities of King, as also of the relative powers of Heenan and Mace, as shown by their combats with the former. We have already repeatedly given the record of both men, and will therefore refrain from repetition. As soon as Mace, by vanquishing Hurst, came into possession of the Pugilistic belt, King threw down the gauntlet to him, which Jim hesitated not to take up, and on the 19th of July, 1861, articles were signed by them for a match. After the lapse of the accustomed period the principals commenced training, and when the day of battle arrived there was nothing to be desired, physically speaking, by their friends. The scene of the conflict was in the Home Circuit, not many miles distant from London, Eng., and everything was placed in order for milling with out unnecessary delay. The betting was 2 to 1 on Mace, who was waited upon by Jack Hicks and Bob Travers, while Bos Tyler and Jack Macdonald seconded King.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. The combatants, having gone through the customary salutation at the scratch, drew back with a slight yet perceptible action, and then put themselves into position. There was at this moment a silence that might be felt round the ring, and the excited glances directed towards the belligerents were sure proofs that every movement was being mentally noted by their partisans. There was undoubtedly, much in the relative bearing of the combatants to rivet the attention of the patrons of the art; for, though both were fine fellows, yet there was that marked difference between them that could not fail to be perceived by even the most uninitiated. Mark the towering height of King, standing 6 feet 1¾ inches in his stocking feet; and as he faces his opponent with attentive watchfulness, how imposing and proportionating appears the advantages in his favor! Tom, as stated by Langham, when he last entered, pulled down the beam at 170lbs., and, taken all in all, there could be no disputing he was a fine made fellow, although by good practical judges it was thought he would have been improved by the addition of a ton of flesh. Then, like Mace, has a fine keen eye, but lacks the square chin and fully developed, firm set jaw, which are sure to be looked on as most assuring proof of the "real thing." King has a good deal of the merry, fun in the muscles of his face, he was hardly so full as a man of such mould ought to have been. That he was in splendid condition could not for a moment be denied. His skin glowed with that ruddy tinge which is an unmistakable criterion for the human frame when in perfect health. If King was all to be desired, Mace was unquestionably as fit as a fiddle. In this respect there was nothing to choose between them. When stripped, Mace's muscles showed out as in relief, and Tom, after keeping guard for a moment, dropped his mawleys and rested the left on the thigh. Jem being out of range, and finding Tom had dropped his daddles, followed suit, and the position of the belligerents was at this moment a study for the artist. Presently Tom dropped the right arm on the hip, and rubbed the wrist of his left hand; and Jem, who, no doubt, felt the chilly effects of the morning air, just coming out of his flannels, rubbed his breast, as the best means to keep it warm. Tom, who hit with better intention than judgment, did no effective execution. The combatants closed, when Jem gave the back heel and King was thrown rather heavily.

2. Matters were unquestionably loading up for the East End division: the immense improvement Jem had made was certainly striking, for the gallant Tom was evidently suffering from his exertions. King led both mawleys, delivering the left on the nob; Jem countered with the left, and repeated the medicine with the right. Tom, not to be denied, fought gamely to a close, and in the fall Jem hit his face in an ugly manner, falling in the centre of the ring.

3. After a little manœuvring the combatants closed at the ropes. Mace got on them, when Tom slipped and went down, it being purely an accident. There were derisive shouts of "foul," followed by enthusiastic cheers for both.

4. Every scientific point the exigencies of the moment required was employed by the seconds of Tom, whose practised eyes well and surely marked the difficulties of their man. The sound advice that urged him to make the fighting had not been without effect, as the result as was anticipated; and now that judgment that urged at one good rapid action was turned and employed to recruit their man as much as possible. Tom led with his left, but there was no steam in the blow. Mace countered the left on the front of the dial, and followed up with a right hander on the damaged pepper. The men now closed and went down in the middle of the ring.

5. King dashed out left and right, but, not being to distance, was met with a stop from Jem, after shifting and getting the measure, delivered, with good effect, both mawleys. The belligerents fought with game determination to a close, when Mace went down near the ropes.

6. Tom, with plucky resolution to do all that became a brave, resolute boxer, went to his man to force the fighting, and found Mace by no means adverse to join issue on the milling suit. In the exchanges both men did good service, and Jem was severely mauled on the front of the dial. Jem, with the left, also got home on the cheek, and followed up with another from the right, delivered from the fore arm. They closed and went down.

7. On the call of time Tom was brought to a close, both seconds throwing in with the best intentions, and in the subsequent rally Jem drew himself together and stood the model of a man. King, with an appearance of confidence that was highly encouraging to his friends, led off, and Jem, after shifting and getting the measure, delivered, with good effect, both mawleys. The belligerents fought with game determination to a close, when Mace went down near the ropes.

8. Tom, with plucky resolution to do all that became a brave, resolute boxer, went to his man to force the fighting, and found Mace by no means adverse to join issue on the milling suit. In the exchanges both men did good service, and Jem was severely mauled on the front of the dial. Jem, with the left, also got home on the cheek, and followed up with another from the right, delivered from the fore arm. They closed and went down.

9. On the call of time Tom was brought to a close, both seconds throwing in with the best intentions, and in the subsequent rally Jem drew himself together and stood the model of a man. King, with an appearance of confidence that was highly encouraging to his friends, led off, and Jem, after shifting and getting the measure, delivered, with good effect, both mawleys. The belligerents fought with game determination to a close, when Mace went down near the ropes.

10. Mace was evidently much improved, and the seconds of Tom, finding the champion had succeeded in shaking himself well together, urged their man more earnestly than ever to go and force the fighting, as that was the only way to maintain the lead. Such had been the rapid action of the men, so had they paced over the ring, that the ground, owing to the rain, was cut up and broken in all directions, and, owing to its pasty substance, greasy and difficult to get through. Tom delivered the right on the pepper-castor and then fought his way to a close. Jem, with well-steadied action, met his man and sent both mawleys in with artistic neatness. Jem, in the struggle, gave the back heel and Tom was thrown. Jem was the first stepping from the ground, and he patted Tom in a good tempered manner amidst cries of "Bravo, Mace!"

11. The seconds of King were working with the energy of Cyclops, for, as Tom was suffering from apparent distress, he stood in need of all attention. The admirers of Mace were now radiant with delight, for Jem, by his manœuvring with a fire of a Heenan, looked like a flint refreshed. Tom, who was rather slow to scratch, opened the ball as usual. Jem met him and in the counter-hitting both did execution, Mace, at half distance, making good use of the left. In the close that followed Tom, ever merrily, for the muscles were in repose, and almost at the moment the contest was decided the police were found to be looming in the distance, but they were fortunately just too late to mar sport. As may be imagined, Mace was greatly delighted, and from the working of the muscles of the face it was evident he was much agitated with the excitement of the moment. King recovered consciousness almost immediately on the fight had been decided against him, and, as may be anticipated, the game fellow was much crestfallen at the notion of having lost. He was a good deal punished, and after he was dressed Tom had a handkerchief tied over his right temple, which, however, when he left the ring, was not entirely closed. Mace was also, as will be seen from our description of the battle, a good deal punished, his phiz presenting a far different appearance tohwhat it had ever done before in his preceding battles.

Space permitting we will publish an account of the second battle for the championship in November of the same year, in which King was the victor.

THE TRIGGER.

PRAIRIE SHOOTING CLUB.

RULES OF SHOOTING.

The above named trap shooting organization, of Chicago, Ill., is to hold a grand tournament at Dexter Park, Chicago, commencing on Monday, Aug. 8th, and continuing throughout the week. Fifteen prizes are offered, aggregating $5,000. There will also be several small prizes and sweepstake matches shot off; each contest save one to be open to all comers. One $700, two $500, two $400, two $300, one $250, one $150, and four $100 prizes are among those to be awarded. The club have in their charge 25,000 wild pigeons for the occasion. Any necessary information can be obtained by addressing S. McDowall, Secretary, 170 and 172 Randolph street, Chicago. For the information and guidance of our trigger pulling friends we present herewith the rules of shooting adopted by the club:

Rule 1. All matches shall be shot from H. & T. plunge or lever traps, the choice of which the referee shall decide by toss. The boundaries shall be eighty yards for single birds, and one hundred yards for double birds, which shall be measured from a point, equidistant from each trap in a direct line between the two traps, or when more than two traps are used, in a direct line between the centre traps. The rise for single birds shall be 21 yards, and for double birds 18 yards.

2. In single bird shooting, the distance between the traps shall be five yards; in double bird shooting, when four traps are used, they shall be 3½ yards apart.

3. Two judges and a referee shall be appointed before the shooting commences, and the referee's decision shall be final. He may allow a contestant another bird, in case the latter shall be balked or interfered with, if he thinks the party entitled to it.

4. If a bird in its flight drop dead or fly over the bounds, in such a manner, that to shoot at it would endanger any person, another bird shall be allowed, and if a bird is shot at within the bounds by any person beside the party at the score, the referee shall decide how it shall be counted, or whether another bird shall be shot.

5. After the shooter has taken his stand at the score, he shall not level his gun, or raise the butt above his elbow, until the bird is on the wing. He should be in-line on this rule, the bird or birds shall be scored as lost, no matter what he may say or do.

6. The shooter when ready is to say "pull," and the puller to obey such signal, and pull the trap or traps fairly and evenly, and release the bird or birds instanter. If any unnecessary severity be used in releasing, before the signal is given by the shooter, he shall have the option of calling "no bird" and refusing to shoot, but if he shoots at it on its afterward rising, it will be considered "a bird."

7. The shooter shall not leave the score to shoot, and all birds must be on the wing when shot at; or will be scored as lost birds. If the bird does not rise immediately after the trap is pulled the shooter shall have the option of calling "no bird," but if he shoots at it on its afterward rising, it will be considered "a bird."

8. It shall be optional with the party shooting to gather his own birds or appoint a person to do so for him. In all cases the bird must be gathered by hand, without any forcible means, within three minutes from the time it alights, or be scored a miss. The party must walk in a direct line from the score to the bird. All "birds" must show shot marks if challenged.

9. Should a bird alight on a tree or building, within the bounds, it shall be scored a "lost bird." A bird once out of bounds shall be scored as lost.

10. Should a gun miss fire, or fail to discharge from any cause, it shall score as a lost bird, unless the referee finds upon examination that the gun was properly loaded and the miss-fire unavoidable, in which case he shall allow another bird.

11. In double shooting, both birds must be on the wing when the first is shot at. If but one bird flies, and one barrel fired or snapped, the bird shall not be scored, whether killed or missed, but the party shooting shall have two more birds; or if both birds fly and are killed with one barrel, he must shoot at two other birds.

12. The shooter shall not be allowed to use a gun of larger calibre than that known as No. 10.

13. There shall be no restriction as to size of shot used, or charge of powder, but the charge of shot shall not exceed 1 oz.

14. The club shall provide a standard shot measure, and all guns shall be loaded from the same, except in case of breech loaders, when the referee may open one or more cartridges, to ascertain if the charge of shot is not above the standard. Any person found infringing on this rule shall be barred from further participation in the match.

15. In case of ties at single birds, the distance shall be increased five yards, and shall be shot off at five birds, and this distance shall be established until the match is decided. The ties, in double bird shooting, shall be shot off at 21 yards, at five double rises.

16. At a shooting match all ties shall be shot off on the same grounds immediately after the match, if they can be conveniently before dinner. In case they cannot be concluded by sunset, they shall be concluded on the following day, unless otherwise directed by the judges or referee. This, however, shall not prevent the ties from dividing the prizes, if they mutually agree to do so. Should one refuse to divide, then it must be shot off. Any one of the ties being absent ten minutes after the time agreed upon to shoot them off shall forfeit his right to contest for the prize.

17. Any competitor or other person bribing or attempting to bribe the trapper or puller, or attempting to obtain an unfair advantage in any manner whatsoever, to be disqualified from shooting or starring in the results of the match.

18. The shooter, if he has a breech loader, shall not put the cartridges in his gun until called to the score. If he use a muzzle loader, he shall leave it uncapped until called.

19. Any person participating in a shooting match shall have the privilege of challenging a competitor as to charge of shot used, and the referee shall make such challenged party draw his charges and have them examined, and if found to exceed the limit fixed by rule, he shall forfeit his right to participate in the match, or to any of its revenue in any way. If a referee has gun after being challenged, and before the charge has been examined by the referee, he shall suffer the same penalty as for overloading.

20. Each participant in a shooting match shall hold himself in readiness, and come to the score prepared to shoot when his name is called by the scorer. If he be longer than five minutes, it shall be discretionary with the referee whether to allow him to shoot or not in the match.

PHILADELPHIA.—"How do you spell Feindelly?" asked a small storekeeper of his partner, as he was about to send a letter to the city of Brotherly Love. "Why, Fe-i-a, Fein, del, Feindel-ly, Feindelly." "Then I've got it right," said the partner (in ignorance as well as in business). "I thought I might have made a mistake."

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

TEMPORA MUTANTUR.

"The times are changed!"—long, long ago,"
A Roman graybeard signed;
"And still, as seasons wax and wane,
We change with time and tide."
And I glad that I must own
My locks are growing scanter!)
In pensive retrospect repeat,
O tempora mutantur!

Where now are all the village belles
I sonneteered of yore?
Gone—with the fashion of the boots
And bonnets which they wore;
Their dimpled cheeks are wrinkled now,
And Time—the Disenchanter!—
Has dimmed the eyes that dazzled mine—
O tempora mutantur!

Oh, how we raved of Constancy,
Melinda May and I!
I've quite forgotten which was first
To break the tender tie.
I know that I survived the shock,
(Though sworn to die instanter!)
And 'Linda lived—to love again—
O tempora mutantur!

Good Dr. Proser, where is he?
Whose logic clear and strong
Their vanity praised—nor ever deemed
The sere and yellow leaf
Until they heard, and quite preferred
The Reverend Rousing Ranter;
To whom succeeded Parson Prim—
O tempora mutantur!

Yes, times are changed, but one can dine,
And May's the host to-day.
"No dinner?" John!—"Sir, if you please,
Mag's gone to 'go for Snooks!'"
And wife's—"she's gone along with Mag."
John! bring me that demister!—
By Jove! I'll go and vote for Jones!
O tempora mutantur!

SEDUCTION AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

A YOUNG LADY ROBBED OF HER VIRTUE AND DESERTED.

One of the most villainous and atrocious cases of unprincipled love intrigue has just been brought to light in the city of Morrison, Illinois. The victim is a young lady of about nineteen years, an orphan, who has lived with some friends in the above city for a number of years. She is reported to be an innocent, modest, retiring, unassuming girl, whose reputation as regards chastity was never questioned, and who has moved in the best society of the town, admired and loved by all who knew her. The villain who is the principal actor in the affair is William Furlong, a gay young Lothario, whose appearance denotes that he spends much time on his person and toilet, in order to make himself a "stunner" among the ladies. Being a resident of the town for a long time, and his family having been among the first settlers, he was a welcome guest at many of the best houses, and was employed as clerk in the railroad depot, it was an easy matter for him to enter into and ingratiate himself into the company of those who lay claim to virtue and good character. Four or five years ago he evinced a preference for the young lady referred to, and ever since has paid her continued attention, claiming her company exclusively; in fact, showing a very prominent spirit of jealousy if any other young man made an effort to gain her notice. Many people were inclined to believe that they would be married, and, probably to more effectually guard against her receiving attention from any other source, he confided to many of his intimate friends the secret of their engagement in that effect. At what time they became engaged is not known, but from that time he approached her with advances of a disreputable character, and, when firmly but kindly repulsed, he upbraided her in language calculated to convey the idea of his doubting her love and fidelity to him. When he failed with this argument he resorted to threats, saying he would break the engagement, &c., and, under the combined influences of those varied circumstances, he accomplished his infernal design—that of seducing her. The results of this act became evident to her, placing her in a condition which called for an early fulfilment of his promise of marriage, in order to conceal from the world the errors which had been committed. In the moment of trial this youthful seducer proves himself "false to the sex," for, although when called upon by the injured lady, he at first agrees to fulfill his vows, upon consultation with his family, who object to the alliance in the strongest terms, he determined not to keep his promise, but managed to persuade the girl to take her departure from the town, sends her away to her friends at a distance in hopes that her shame and his dishonor will thereby be kept secret, and stalks around the town as self-important as ever, the Cloth of Gold,' would have attracted good houses. O'Reardon's performance upon tumblers and piano simultaneously (styled tumbleronicon) was repeatedly encored. Sheldon's Rough Shingle dog really a happy effort on the part of that gentleman. McAuley's Band begins his season of 1870-'71 on the 29th of August at the Front, the season of '70 of the combination now playing there will be of short duration."

CINCINNATI INTELLIGENCE, up to July 26th, is furnished by our correspondent as follows:—"Business at the Buckeye this week has been wretched, and closed doors would undoubtedly pay for the next month. The Race Street company has been thinned down by the withdrawal of Carrie Avery and Augusta Lamereaux. Miss Avery is engaged for the Metropolitan, Washington, to open the 1st of September, and, in the meantime will probably play in Chicago, opening there next week. Celia Ifert, who has always been a prime favorite here, recommenced on Monday, July 25th, and had a cordial reception. Addie Sprague, one of the reliable pillars of the hall, has been offered an engagement for September at the Metropolitan, Washington, D. C., and will probably accept it. On Wednesday last she had a complimentary benefit. John McVeigh and Carrie Armstrong are to withdraw after this week, being about to travel under canvas.....Charley Sullivan and Kitty Lagrange opened at the Alhambra on the 25th. On Wednesday evening Hen Mason, Johnny Weaver, Marsh Adams and Sullivan were all dropped, owing to slim business. The show was run by the women exclusively for two nights. July 29th, Dick Gorman and Tom Adams were to be the end men, with Harry McDonald as interlocutor. Early Miller was also added to the company. Miss Nellie Anderson has been performing Jenny Lind this week in the burietta of that name, supported by George R. Stevens as Granby Gag. Both are good.....The Academy of Music closed temporarily last evening. Tom Adams opened there on the 25th, taking Charley Sullivan's place, who had gone to the Alhambra. Minnie Clark was another addition. It will re-open next week..... A number of the lads and lassies propose variety canvas exhibitions during the heated term, no less than three shows leaving here for the Nicholsonville, Ky., fair, which opens Tuesday, August 2d. One under the management of Mr. Thomas will consist of Marsh Adams, Lew Brimmer, Johnny McVeigh, Bobby McKown, Annie Chase and Carrie Armstrong. A second, controlled by Jerry Johnson, will comprise Harry Alberta, Charley Sullivan, Tom Adams, May Clifton and Lon Rainford. With the third party go Johnny Weaver, Hen Mason, Sam Gardner, late of Skiford and Gaylord's, and others. Tim Woodruff, and some more contemplate going out to the Ohio fairs the last of August.....Phil Diefenbach left this week to join the James Robinson circus as ring master."

BAKER'S CONCERT HALL, Buffalo, N. Y., has been doing a fair business. Nellie Hallitt Taylor is the present star. She sings, dances, and appears in the golden statues. Master Johnny, clog dancer, and Emma and Kitty, the former a singer and the latter a dancer, are in the company. Miss Carrie Duval and Harry Brooks made their first appearance July 25th.

GENESEE AND STARR engaged a variety company to open at the Sans Souci Music Hall at Long Branch, N. J., on July 16th. On July 25th they left without paying salaries. They also engaged a number of artists to sing in concert at the Continental Hotel, on the 23d. Lee Lenox and Philippe, tenors, amongst the number, who, learning how matters stood, refused to sing unless their salaries were paid in advance. The money was not forthcoming, and consequently they did not appear. Warrants are out for the arrest of Genesee and Starr, as they owe, it is alleged, quite a number of bills. This statement is vouched for over the signatures of Wallace and Wood, Lew Cole, James D. Roome, J. R. Campbell, Morrissey and Miss Naomi Forrest.

AT METROPOLITAN HALL, Washington, D. C., says our correspondent, "Novice:"—Frank Bell, eccentric song and dance performer, re-appeared on July 25th, and Prof. Tanner, with his trained dogs and monkeys, opened on the same date, but retired from the company after giving two performances. Larry Tooley, in his Dutch specialties, continues as one of the main attractions. He sings a variety of Teutonic selections and is nightly called before the curtain again and again. His friends are urging him, I understand, to forsake Ethiopian business and follow the line of a Dutch comedian exclusively. Joe Mack retains his position on the end in the minstrel scene, and is a great favorite. In the olio he appears in special acts and also in farces and Ethiopian sketches. Mr. Porter, the stage-manager, continues in the position of interlocutor. Minnie Grey sings a ballad in the first part and in the olio; she appears in comic songs, and also assumes different characters in farces and interludes. Marie Zoel sings 'Daisy Dean' in the first part of the entertainment, and afterwards dances a clog medley, besides doing a song and dance. She is exceedingly versatile and seems to be perfectly at home in singing a song or doing a clog or song and dance. Alice Somers, who defeated Miss Zoel in a match clog dance last week, left here on the 24th of July, in order to open at Tony Pastor's on the following evening, Dody Zanfretta, danseuse, opens here on August 1st."

BUSINESS AT TAMMANY HALL, Bay City, Mich., has been good for the past week. On the 25th ult., four fresh faces were added to the company, Ida Morton, singer and dancer; Little Pauline, comic singer; Mollie Conway, dancer, and Emma Dormer, dancer; all the old favorites including Kitty Le Roy, Annie Sherwood, Charles Walters, Lon Chapin, Nellan and Gilroy, have been well received.

PROFESSOR RICHARD RISLEY publishes in our advertising columns a caution to managers with regard to engaging the ventriloquist, G. W. Jester. The professor has received a great deal of unfair treatment since his return from Europe. He brought over a large variety troupe which contained many excellent artists, whose success was marred, if not absolutely killed by the injudicious management of the Tammany, where they first appeared. After they closed there, efforts were made by persons to break up the company by offers of brief lucrative engagements elsewhere, and in this they were partially successful. Mr. Jester, who is under contract to Prof. Risley for one year, after a few weeks absence returned to his allegiance, and again renewed or ratified the contract in writing. Efforts have recently been made by outside parties to induce Mr. Jester to break this contract, but without success. The best of feeling now exists between Mr. Jester and Prof. Risley, and all applications for engagements must be made as set forth in the advertisement.

THE OPENING of the Exchange Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., has been postponed until Aug. 27th, in consequence of the hot weather. Dan Shelby, the manager, advertises for talent, including a leader of orchestra.

Negro Minstrelsy.

THE MORRISON MINSTRELS commence their fourth annual tour on Monday, August 29th, starting from Providence, R. I. The company is composed of twenty-two artists and a silver cornet band. W. Reed is the advance agent. Their route will be west overland to California, thence to South America and Australia.

R. M. HOOLEY, OF HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE, Brooklyn, L. I., has taken a ten years' lease of Bryan's Hall, Chicago, Ill., which he intends immediately altering into a first-class opera house. Its site is most eligible, being upon a great thoroughfare of travel and directly opposite the city hall. He has also purchased, in Madison, Wis., the block of stores known as Dayton Block, formerly "Van Vevans," where the post office and theatre were located for many years. It is Mr. Hooley's intention to convert this into a first-class opera house. He will then be the possessor of three opera houses. By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that he is now prepared to receive applications from artists.

SKIFF AND GAYLORD'S MINSTRELS commenced a season of six nights at Weisiger Hall, Louisville, Ky., on August 1st. Gustave Bideaux, who is the musical director of this troupe, was recently presented with a silver and gold snuff box, valued at $50, by his friend and traveling companion, Tom Baker.

SKIFF AND GAYLORD'S MINSTRELS played all last week at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati. Our correspondent says:—"They have done a very fair biz., although the weather has been sweltering hot. Their main feature are four end men—Tom Baker, Lew Gaylord, Johnny Stiles and Ed. Talbott; a fair quintet, consisting of Bidaux, Tyrrell, Reese, Laing and Gulick; and Stiles, Phelps and Armstrong, cloggists and song and dance men. J. T. Gulick, now acting as interlocutor, joined the party here, having been of late with the Bryants. Sam Gardner quit. In addition to the regular minstrel performance, there is an exhibition of dissolving views, which is very good. Low Gaylord received a benefit July 20th."

BILLY EMERSON'S MINSTRELS will commence a season of about three weeks at Wood's, Cincinnati, August 12th.

ELWOOD'S FEMALE MINSTRELS appeared in Harrington's Opera House, Providence, R. I., for one night only, on Saturday, July 30th.

A NEW MINSTREL TROUPE called the Metropolitan Minstrels has been organized in Omaha, Neb., and exhibited in that city on July 22d. The following artists comprise the troupe:—Charley Fisher, George Mattice, Walter Thorne, Ed. Smith, Master Crowley, Happy Jack and Little Dick. They performed in Platsmouth on the 24th.

DUPREZ AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS appeared at the Academy of Music, Omaha, Nebraska, four nights, commencing July 24th.

JOHN A. MACK, Ethiopian minstrel, died at Rafael, Cal., Saturday, July 23d, and was quite popular in his profession. He has been before the California public for the last four years, and was ill for several months. He was a man of considerable talent, and had he been more regular and studious in his habits, could have made for himself a name which would long have been remembered. Some of his adaptations were quite good and struck the popular vein. He was thirty-four years of age and a native of Pennsylvania. His body was taken to San Francisco and interred there.

EMERSON'S MINSTRELS perform at Leavenworth, Kansas, August 5th and 6th.

LOW GAYLORD, of Skiff and Gaylord's Minstrels, writes us that some person has been passing himself off in various localities as "Joe Gaylord, general agent of Skiff and Gaylord's Minstrels." He wishes us to state that Joe H. Mack, Jr., is the contracting agent and Albert Bidaux the advertising agent of that troupe, and that there is no one in that company by the name of Joe Gaylord, neither has he any relative by that name. He pronounces all parties other than the above, who pretend to be agents for that troupe, "frauds."

A YOUNG MAN advertises that he wants a situation where he can learn the minstrel business.

KELLY AND LEON'S MINSTRELS gave two performances at Wall's Opera House, Washington, D. C., on July 25th and 26th, concerning which our correspondent "Novice" says, "that notwithstanding the oppressive heat, they attracted very good audiences. At the close of the first part on the last night, Mr. Kelly announced to the audience that Mr. Leon would not appear; that on the previous night, he (Le.) had taken a severe cold from having sat in a draft of air after leaving the stage, and was so very hoarse that he could not possibly sing. Consequently the bill was considerably changed. Dave Wilson gave a bone solo, and George and Willie Guy repeated their new double song and dance entitled 'Croquet,' and Purdy and Price rehearsed the play of 'Camille'. Other novelties were presented and the evening's performance was vastly enjoyed by the audience."

KELLY AND LEON'S MINSTRELS will occupy the Academy of Music in Buffalo, N. Y., August 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th.

KELLY AND LEON'S MINSTRELS opened at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, on Wednesday, 27th inst., and closed on Saturday, 30th. Their initial performance, says "Don Juan," "in direct contrast to that of their first appearance in the earlier part of the present month, was greeted by a very moderate audience, which is attributed more than anything else to the heavy exodus of our goodly citizens from Baltimore to Cape May, where the crack 5th Regt. M. N. G. is being entertained by their Philadelphia brethren. The troupe presented a highly attractive programme, and the selections and singing in the first part, especially of 'When the Roses Bloom,' by Edwin Kelly, and 'I Turn with a Sigh,' by Master Lewis Fink, were very good. Leon, on account of having a bad cold, did not sing in the olio; Kelly and Purdy appeared in a banjo solo and dance. Dave Wilson was encored in his bone solo, and the opera of 'Le Petit Faust,' by which Leon impersonated Marguerite, and Kelly Doctor Faust, was a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment. The same programme was repeated on Thursday evening to a much better house. On Friday and Saturday an entire change of bill, including the burlesque opera of 'La Bell I. N' was given."

W. H. MAFFITT, of Manning's Minstrels, is anxious to hear from H. A. Marshall, the cornet player. He can be addressed at the Dearborn Theatre, Chicago, Ill., where he commenced his season on August 1st.

GEORGE WARREN, banjoist, is in Lowell, Mass.

J. M. SMITH, baritone singer, who is posted in minstrel business, advertises that he wants to join a troupe.

TALENT, including clog dancers, acrobats and singers, is wanted for the Keystone Minstrels, now organizing to visit the state fairs. Address H. Eugene Lawrence, as per advertisement.

WHITE AND EMMERSON, double song and dance performers, advertise that they can be engaged.

MANNING'S MINSTRELS played in Peoria, Ill., on July 27th and 28th.

Circuses.

R. E. J. MILES has purchased De Haven and Co.'s circus, and is now traveling with it, the name being unchanged. They exhibited in Newport, Ky., July 29th, and the following day in the Seventeenth ward, Cincinnati. Their route thence was to be up the Ohio, until September, when they will start for the south.

WM. DUTTON advertises that he is at liberty to engage for the winter season.

JOHN HENRY COOKE and M'lle Henrietta Cooke are thus noticed by the Times, Portsmouth, N. H.—"Stone & Murray's celebrated circus. We cannot even mention the numerous attractive features, which are each of them sufficient to call out crowds of people. The two star performers are the world-renowned equestrians M'lle Henrietta Cooke and John Henry Cooke. The lady captivated Johnny Bull and the Frenchman while in Europe. Alexandre Dumas wrote some pretty things about Miss Cooke, of which the following will do as a sample:—She is the paragon of grace, and her superb equestrianism is a realization of the ecstasy of delight. What she accomplishes no mortal ever attempted; what she performs no one can imitate. To see her is to be enchanted; not to see her is a regret. Her riding is intensely thrilling to witness, and indelible to the memory.' As to John Henry, he fairly took the frog-eaters by storm when he rode six bare-back horses. One of the Paris papers, a sober old weekly journal, bursts out with:—'What shall we say of the bold and splendid feats of the great John Henry Cooke? To speak of them as astonishing does not convey the true idea of their actual excellence. To praise them for their grace, we must assert that we never saw their equal. To laud them for their beauty, we do not use extravagant language in saying that Paris never had an equestrian arouse so much admiration as Mons. John Henry Cooke.'"

THE EUROPEAN CIRCUS exhibited at London, Canada, on July 23th. It will be in Port Huron, August 3d, St. Clair, Mich., August 4th, and Memphis 5th.

They will camp at Cone Spring on Sunday, July 31st, as the drought is so severe that they have great difficulty in procuring a sufficient supply of water. While performing at Kenton, Ohio, a correspondent writes:—"G. G. Grady, who some eighteen months since fitted out his circus here, returned from his Southern trip and treated his friends to an old fashioned circus' exhibition on July 16th. In the afternoon, the canvass, which is a round top measuring 120 feet, was crowded to repletion. At night the canvass was extended and extra seats put in, but the accommodation proved insufficient. While Mr. Grady makes no attempt at outside show, it is considered here that he has one of the best shows traveling." First class equestrians are wanted. See advertisement.

MR. ALF BURNETT, in a letter dated Denver City, Colorado, July 20, takes exception to some remarks of a San Francisco correspondent, and denies certain of his statements in toto. The assertion that Leo Hudson advanced him money, or that he ever received a penny from her, he pronounces a base fabrication; he assures us that he paid every performer to whom he was indebted; he admits losing some money in San Francisco, in the same as other managers have done; he entered into no engagement with Leo Hudson, although the matter was talked of, but he could not get the consent of the owner of the building to allow "Mazeppa" to be placed on the Alhambra stage. This is the substance of his letter, and we give it in order that Mr. Burnett, who is a reliable man, may be placed in a proper position before the public.

THE DAVENPORT BROTHERS were detected in their tricks and publicly exposed at Bay City, Michigan, July 22d. Ever since they made their last appearance in that city, parties had been at work to find some means by which the pretensions of the spiritualists should be silenced. The Brothers were invited by the citizens to return and give another exhibition upon the night in question. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity, crowds had to go away unable to get seats; the people brought chairs and stools and the aisles were packed. On the appearance of the Davenports, a committee was chosen to tie them in their cabinet, and, if possible, detect them, one of whom was Thomas K. Harding, foreman of the Bay City Journal. After events proved that he went fully prepared for his work and determined to perform it. The spiritualists claim that the hands which present themselves from the orifice in the cabinet are spiritual and not flesh and blood. Mr. Harding determined to make this a test. The "spiritual hand" made its appearance when Harding seized it. He had previously besmeared his fingers with printer's ink, which nothing short of oil of some kind can remove. He left his mark upon the hand which the Davenports tried in vain to erase during the brief time allowed them, and Harding and printer's ink triumphed. When the Brothers came forth from the cabinet they were marked meth. The audience was in ecstacies and the game was up. In vain did the manager attempt to explain, but Harding was incorrigible. Applause, hisses, roars and groans followed. A gentleman of the city offered to wager $1,000, that "he could furnish a cabinet and ropes and tie them in such a manner that the spirits would be compelled to carry them out of the key-hole, before they could get free in any other manner." The Brothers left by Alpena the next morning.

Musical.

AT DRURY LANE the Italian Opera Company have given only repetition performances during the week ending July 16th, the most conspicuous of which being the final representation of "Mignon," on July 14th. A morning performance of "Faust" is announced for July 20th, when Signor Ferotti, an Italian tenor of promise in his own country, will appear in the title role. On the 23d, Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" is announced.....At Covent Garden the Royal Italian Opera have also given repetitions, so that we have got very little to say about their doings. This house closes on July 23d, and since the beginning the end is noticeable, Mme. Pauline Lucca having taken her benefit on July 16th, when she appeared for the first time in England in Mozart's "Zerlina." The result of the performance was just what might have been expected by those who estimate rightly the artiste's powers, but who had beforehand certain that Mme. Lucca could not sing the music, and she did not; that is to say, she failed to render it in anything like an adequate manner. In "La ci darem" the orchestra could not possibly accompany her, and matters were no bit the better in "Batti, batti." Mlle. Titiens appeals to her friends on July 25th, as Lucretia Borgia. Mlle. Patti does the same on July 28th, as Marguerite in "Faust," and Mlle. Sessi follows suit on July 29th, as Gilda in "Rigoletto."

THE OPERA BY MR. BENEDICT entitled "The Old Man of the Mountain," to be produced at Vienna next autumn, is a German version of the "Crusaders."

THE KING OF BAVARIA is turning theatrical impresario and music publisher. He has purchased the Action Theatre and with it three scores of Herr Wagner, "Rheingold," "Walkyrie and another not yet completed, reserving to himself the right of treating with foreign managers for their use, while the composer is to be assured an annual sum of 16,000 francs.

RICHARD LEVI, inspector general of the Court Theatre, in Vienna, at a recent performance of Mehul's "Joseph" was so struck by the performance of Beck, the baritone, that he sent him a letter accompanied by a bottle of wine. "Princes," said he, "lavish decorations and fountains people dance on the artists who enchant them. For myself I have this day received two bottles of first rate genuine Rhine wine, one of which I send for your acceptance. The other I shall drink with much pleasure to your health." M. Beck, it is stated, was exceedingly touched by a gift which "appealed"—he declared—"to his heart" more than any present he ever received, and a wag adds "to his stomach" as well.

AT MARGATE, ENG., during the week ending July 16th, 4,000 people paid a penny each for the privilege of listening on the pier to the performances of the promenade band, said to be the best ever engaged at that seaside resort.

AT STRATFORD-UPON-AVON, in the residence of the Duke of Sutherland, a concert was given on the afternoon of July 11th, for the benefit of the Poor Gentlewomen's Institution, to a numerous and fashionable audience. The following artists participated:—Mme. Ruderdorf, who sang two songs; Miss Marion Severn, Miss Poole, M. Korson and M. Waldeck. Three pianists gave their services. Miss Field playing Schumann's Nachstuck. Mr. F. H. Cowen, who played his own compositions, and W. H. Holmes, who performed Mendelssohn's Lied Ohne Worte. M'lle Perean Liebe played a violin solo by Vieuxtemps, and Mr. Benedict gave to the songs the advantage of his inimitable accompaniment. In the duet between Mr. and Mrs. Rousby with Mr. Nelson played "Delicate Ground," much to the delight of the audience.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY gave its last concert for the season on July 11th, and devoted it wholly to Beethoven's music. The programme comprised the symphonies Nos. 1 and 9. Choral; the Choral Fantasia, Leonora overture and three vocal pieces—"Ah, perfido," "Primo amore" and "Resta." Mme. Rudersdorff sang from the "Ruins of Athens." The solos were taken by Miss Arabella Smith, Miss Elton, Mr. Cummings and Mr. Santley. Mme. Arabella Goddard was the pianist in the Choral Fantasia, and M'lle Nilsson sang "Ah, perfido."

MISS KATE GORDON'S ANNUAL CONCERT took place in the Queen's Concert Room, Hanover Square, on July 25th. She was assisted by the following talent:—Mrs. Wyles, M'lle Drasdil, Mr. A. James and Mr. Renwick, vocalists; Herr Carl Deichman and Oberahur, instrumentalists.

MISS ELLEN JARMAN gave a concert under the direction of M. Lansdown Cottel, at the Hanover Square Rooms, July 7th, and was honored by a large attendance. She played Weelt's "Re plus ultra," Beethoven's sonata op. 53, a solo by Litral, and a Galop di bravura. Miss Jarman was assisted by Mme. Rivoli, late of Manilla, who sang some Italian and English songs. Miss Agnes Lyndhurst, M'lle Belfse, Mr. W. Reeves, Mr. W. C. Bell, and Mr. C. J. Bishenden.

ENGLISH OPERA AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE continues to meet with favor, the management having secured Mme. George Perren, on July 12th, "La Somnambula" was produced, on which occasion 8,354 persons visited the Palace. Miss Blanche Cole was the Amina, Miss H. Goodall the Lisa, and Mrs. A. Cook the Theresa, Mr. F. Connell the Count Rodolphe, Mr. G. Perrin the Elvino, and Mr. Britton Wright the Alessio. On the 16th the "Rose of Castile" was represented.

THE "LADY OF LYONS," a new musical composition by Mr. Corney Grain, for and dedicated to Miss Kate Santley, the actress, singer, pianist and mimic, was produced at Mr. German Reed's Musical Gallery, on July 11th, and achieved success. It was given in conjunction with "Ages Ago" and "Our Island Home," both of which are very popular and are enjoying a long run.

A correspondent, writing from that city, says that "he has made a great hit, and that he was the first that ever performed with the Indian clubs in Germany. The company there is only engaged from week to week on account of the war. Mr. Reed's three sons have already been enrolled for military service, and he has presented $2,000 to the War Department.

Levy, the great soloist, says:—"In my opinion they quite surpass every instrument of the same character that I have previously tried."
CARMEL, PUTNAM CO., N. Y., May 26, 1870.
GENTLEMEN.—I have much pleasure in saying that the celebrated Distin instruments we have purchased have given the greatest satisfaction. They are perfectly in tune, and their short, light action renders execution as easy as any rotary valve, while the tone is far superior for power and brilliancy. I shall certainly recommend them at every opportunity, as I am sure they only require to be known to ensure their preference over all others in this country, even as they are preferred in Europe. Wishing you every success,
I remain yours truly, W. JOHNSON,
B. M. Carmel Saxhorn Band.
These instruments are manufactured with the latest modern improvements and possess an evenness and equality of tone that cannot be produced upon instruments with ordinary pistons or rotary valves. RED DEAD BALL.
The undersigned beg to call the attention of the Base Ball fraternity, and of dealers in Base Ball materials, to the new Base Ball they have recently introduced, in answer to the demand for a Ball which would possess all the life in it requisite for skillful batting, while at the same time it would not have the elasticity in its composition likely to make it dangerous to field when batted hard or thrown swiftly. Our new Ball is not only made of the best yarn, covering from 1 to 1¼ oz. of the best unvulcanized rubber, but it is colored a dark red
